How Uncle Tom Felt.
A Hoarded Gold Nugget.
One Southern Mill.
Gov. Talmadge's Idea.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 24.

TO SPEND a few days in Atlanta with Herbert Porter, general manager of the Atlanta Georgian and American, is to know how Uncle Tom felt when working for Legree, with the additional disadvantages of having to make speeches. Uncle Tom never had to do that.

Yesterday included two hundred miles of automobiling, four speeches, that got duller and duller, the next to the last from a truck in the public square at Jefferson. Speeches also on the truck by the Mayor of Jefferson, to welcome you, and by John N. Holder, editor of the Jackson Herald, a weekly "$1.50 a year in advance" and worth easily $5.

Near a monument erected in his memory in the square, Dr. Crawford W. Long, beneath a mulberry tree, according to tradition, performed the first surgical operation under anaesthesia, removing a tumor from James M. Venable, on March 30, 1842.

The Venable family still exists and thrives in Atlanta. It owns Stone Mountain.

NEXT STOP Gainesville, and there a visit to the Johnson & Johnson mills, which manufacture more cotton for surgical and general medical use than any other institution in the world, 6,000,000 pounds of it a year.

Mr. Harry Purvis, superintendent, very young, prematurely wise, thanks to the Georgia Institute of Technology, whence he was graduated, shows you a perfect manufacturing institution, admirably clean, efficient, all the workers vigorous men and women of the Anglo-Saxon type. There are few others in the state of Georgia.

You have heard it suggested that men should abandon machines, and go back to the hand loom and other hand tools, pick and shovel, instead of the steam shovel, etc.

Some still work with the hand loom in Georgia, and millions work with it in Asia. At the Johnson & Johnson mills, you stand in a room containing eleven hundred machines, their shuttles roaring back and forth.

Six hundred human beings work in that mill. If the work they do in a year were done by hand labor, it would require six hundred thousand men, twice the population of Atlanta.

THE MILL runs two shifts of eight hours a day. Employes living in substantial brick cottages, well built, pay 60 cents a week per room. A four-room cottage costs $2.40 a week which pays for electric light, telephone, electricity for cooking and heating water.

The company maintains a perfect clinic, with six doctors, giving free medical attention to the workers and their families and a free school for children up to the seventh grade older children are sent to Gainesville High School at the company's expense.

TWO DOLLARS and forty cents for a comfortable cottage made of brick, for cooking, heating, lighting, washing, seems cheap.

But in Asia, you could hire workers for less than two dollars and forty cents a week. And if we are to have decent life for workers in the United States, we must also have tariff protection, to keep out competition that would make such conditions impossible.

NEXT EVENT, a Chamber of Commerce dinner at Gainesville, speeches there, and presentation, to your narrator, of a genuine gold nugget, found in the Georgia mountains where, probably, there is plenty more gold.

The writer, who desires to hoard this gold, nicely mounted on black velvet in a little box, hopes that President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau will accept the excuse that a poor woman of the London slums offered to a severe judge who criticized her because her baby had no authentic father. She said:

"May it please your worship, it is a very small baby."

It is a small nugget, but full of interesting possibilities and suggestions of wealth untold "in them hills."

Of course, if the government must have it, the nugget will be shipped to Washington and added to the other seven thousand million dollars worth.

AT THAT Gainesville Chamber of Commerce dinner the two local editors, Albert S. Hardy, Sr., of the Gainesville News, and A. F. Dean, of the Gainesville Eagle, both weeklies, sit side by side, without a blow or a cross look.

Mr. Dean, who is very young, replying to the kind words of Mr. Hardy, considerably older, did drag in Macbeth's "Tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing," but added that he was not referring to Mr. Hardy's editorial page in the rival Gainesville News.

EARLY yesterday morning, interviews with youthful editors of the future, Lulu Ames, editor of "Agnostic," published by the students of Agnes Scott College, Louie Marsh, and George Goodwin, of the "Tattler," published by the Boys' High School, and and Bill Watson, editor of the "Modern Knight," published by the Central Night School, extremely intelligent young people.

Lulu Ames will live to be a successful editor of a paper, if she sticks to journalism, but it would be much better to marry and be the mother of several little editors, and direct them.

WAR THREAT AGITATES ITALY

Knickerbocker Writes On Austria, Crisis From Trieste

Editor's Note — Italy is worried now as never before since the World War, writes H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service's brilliant foreign correspondent in the twelfth article of his series "Will War Come."

Knickerbocker visits Trieste, near the Austrian border and learns why Italy does not want Germany to have Austria.

Italy has ordered a crack motorized army corps, capable of moving at 30 miles an hour with all equipment, from Verona to Bolzano, within striking distance of the Austrian frontier.

Bombing airplanes could reach it from the present Austrian border in half an hour.

A motorized division could reach it, if no resistance were offered, in six hours. This is one reason why Italy does not want Germany to have Austria.

Next door is the next reason why Italy does not want Germany to have Austria. The South Tyrol, "re-

PITTSBURGHER LOST ON FLIGHT

The turbulent Atlantic, just off New York, was being combed today for the body of a Pittsburgh boy, Lieut. George F. McDermott—the fifth to die since the Army has been carrying the air mail. He lived at 823 Lilac street, Greenfield.

He dropped into the sea with his big amphibian plane late yesterday, 20 miles off Rockaway Point while flying from New York to Langley Field, Virginia, where he was to enter the Army mail service on the Newark-Miami run. Two officers accompanying him,

MRS. MASSIE COLLAPSES AT RENO

Breakdown Follows Divorce From Lieutenant

International News Service.

RENO, Nev., Feb. 24.—Mrs. Thalia Massie, central figure in the Honolulu "honor slaying" tragedy two years ago, was in a hospital today under treatment for nervousness following her divorce yesterday from Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N.

Mrs. Massie suffered a collapse at the Heidelberg Inn, where she was attending a party with friends last night, and was taken to the hospital by her attorney, George Springmeyer, and Dr. Vinton A. Muller, the latter ordering her to take at least two days' rest in the institution before leaving Reno.

POISON DENIED

Reports that Mrs. Massie was suffering from the effects of poison were denied emphatically by Dr. Muller, who said that her condition was brought about by acute nervousness over her court appearance.

Following her arrival in Reno January 10, Mrs. Massie said that she hoped to turn over a new page in her life and, following the divorce yesterday, she said that she had done so—that her former life's book was closed and sealed.

She reiterated that she had obtained the divorce at the insistence of Lieut. Massie.

Although the case yesterday was tried behind closed doors, it was understood that Mrs. Massie testified that she had been at all times a dutiful wife. She charged Lieut. Massie with mental cruelty, it was declared, and related that she had asked Lieut. Massie for an interview, but that he had refused to grant it.

TRAGEDY IGNORED

There was no mention of the Honolulu tragedy in which her husband, her mother, the socially prominent Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two Navy enlisted men were found guilty of the manslaughter of Joseph Kahahawai, one of five half-casts whom Mrs. Massie accused of criminally attacking her. The defendants were released after "serving" one hour in custody.

First Lady Delays West Virginia Trip

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has postponed her announced trip to the Reedsville (W. Va.) federal subsistence homestead project on Monday.

A too-crowded calendar was given as the cause. Her trip was to have been for the purpose of inspecting and formally opening the first three demonstration homes planned by herself and Miss Nancy Cook.

Ex-Grid Star, 3 Others Saved in Frat Fire

Trapped by smoke in a second-floor bedroom during a blaze at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house, 258 North Dithridge street, Ted Dailey, former Pitt football star, and three companions were rescued by firemen early today.

Police said the youths had returned to the burning building to retrieve clothes and valuables. They became confused by the smoke.

Besides Dailey, those assisted down a ladder by firemen were Fritz Figert, George Stocker and Charles Martin.

Dailey said:

"About 15 of us were asleep on the third floor when Jess Ferrar came running in, yelling 'fire.' We chased to the street in our night clothes. I stopped at my room on the second floor for my pants. The others were there. The smoke began to get the best of us, so we stuck our heads out the window and yelled. The firemen put up ladders and helped us down."

Battalion Chief John Callahan said the blaze, which was confined to the first floor, apparently started in a basement kitchen. He estimated damage at $1,000.

1st Objective Now To Call on Mother

With the same cool, collected bearing that marked his demeanor during the 11 days of the trial, Bob Soles listened to the words that set him free.

He merely sat down and smiled easily.

The threescore people in the courtroom took it the same way—in silence.

SOLES VERDICT PLEASES NURSE

One of the first to greet Robert S. Soles after the verdict had been returned was Anna Freese, nurse, who had been a witness at the trial. After she had talked to Soles for a few minutes, she was asked what she thought of the verdict. She replied:

"Very, very satisfactory."

She had met Soles in the prisoners' cage, where he was taken after the verdict.

Iva Johnson, maid in the Soles home and a state witness, screamed as the verdict was announced and fell to the floor in a brief swoon.

MURDER TRIAL CLOSES WHEN LONE JURYMAN FOR CONVICTION YIELDS

The McKeesport ex-Army captain and businessman was acquitted by a jury of the murder of his wife, La Roux Soles, in a verdict before Judge Frank P. Patterson at 9:40 o'clock this morning.

His face white, but betraying litte emotion, Soles sprang to his feet with military precision and stood with shoulders squared as Miss Rose McCloskey, the attractive foreman of the jury, announced the decision:

"We find the defendant not guilty."

A shriek from the lips of Ivy Johnson, Negro maid in the Soles home, pierced the courtroom. Suppressed murmurs of approval ran through the crowd. Tipstaves called for order.

The court thanked the jurors for their patience in the two-week trial and they filed out.

Thus ended the most dramatic murder trial in years, a trial that ended with the secret of the death of La Roux Soles, last June, still unsolved.

DEATH STILL MYSTERY

Mrs. Lorrene Winters, one of the six women jurors, summed it all up:

> "The whole thing was all mixed up. We felt we still didn't know who killed her. It was still all a mystery.
> "We took six ballots or so. Last night the vote was 11 to 1 for acquittal. The last juror to join the others cast his vote for acquittal this morning."

The jury had retired at 4:22 o'clock yesterday afternoon, worn from the long grind of testimony and the final day of speechmaking by counsel.

They had heard Soles branded a "skunk" by Prosecutor John F. Haggerty for testifying to indiscretions by his wife. They had heard Assistant Defense Counsel William H. Coleman, tears streaming down his cheeks, plead for Soles' freedom.

NIGHT-LONG DEBATE

Through the evening hours and on through the night until early this morning the six women and six men debated a verdict.

Court attaches had taken away the usual means of diversion between ballots—cards. The jurors had nothing else to do.

Did La Roux Soles end her own life as the defense contended, or did her husband shoot her in a moment of crazed anger as the commonwealth held?

That was the question they had to solve. But they didn't solve it. And feeling their inability to answer the question definitely from the evidence, they voted to clear Soles of the charges.

The jurors ate breakfast this morning and then a final ballot was taken. The lone man who had held out for conviction acceded to the judgment of his fellow jurors. He also voted to acquit the prosperous McKeesporter.

At 9:33 o'clock Judge Patterson took his seat on the bench. Three minutes later the jurors, serious of countenance, marched silently into the courtroom.

COURTROOM CROWD WARNED

A crowd of 60 or 70 persons was in the courtroom. A tipstaff bellowed:

"No demonstration whatever. Anyone attempting it will be committed for contempt."

Soles sat grimly between two deputy sheriffs. Chief Defense Counsel O. K. Eaton conversed quietly with his co-counsel, Coleman. County Detective Peter Connors and Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk were present for the commonwealth. The fiery prosecutor of the trial, John F. Haggerty, hadn't been notified in time to reach the courtroom.

The clerk commanded the jurors:

"Face the prisoner."

To Soles he ordered:

"Face the jury."

Soles leaped up, and stood at attention.

"Have you reached a verdict?"

In unison the 12 men and women chorused:

"We have."

ATROCITIES WILL DOOM NAZIS, LORD MARLEY DECLARES

SEES SECRET FOES OUST HITLER

German Conditions Growing Worse, Speaker Says

From the cruelty "that flows rampant" under Hitler's rule is coming the means to "eradicate" Fascism from Germany, believes Lord Marley, chairman of the international committee for the relief of victims of German Fascism.

After describing a host of atrocities committed in past weeks on innocent civilians in Germany, Lord Marley declared before an important audience, including many civic and social leaders, last night in Taylor Allderdice High School:

"Things are getting worse and not better.

SECRET ORGANIZATION

"Hitler's object is to crush out all opposition, but a secret underground organization is growing up in Germany that may grow into the means of eradicating this type of government and restoring democracy."

Among the more common atrocities of the Nazi, according to Lord Marley, are the beating of "suspects" with steel whips, breaking internal organs, rubbing chemicals and pepper into open wounds and forcing prisoners to commit suicide.

He sums up the German situation thus:

"The regime is government by force, and parliament is, according to Hitler, a form of national decadence. In Germany there is no free speech, and there is no individual liberty, and the German people themselves do not know the true conditions in their country, because of the suppression of authentic news.

"Trade unions have been completely wiped out. All the leaders have been attacked, many being burned to death.

"One way of torturing suspects is by hanging them head downward and beating them. The steel whips so frequently used are made of springs that cut into the bone."

MANY SUFFERERS

"The Jews have suffered seriously because, owing to their economic position in Germany, the professional classes are glad to get rid of competitors in their particular trades. While the majority of refugees coming from Germany are Jewish, the vast majority of those sufferers remaining in Germany are non-Jews."

There can be no exaggeration of the brutality of the crimes committed under Hitler, Lord Marley asserted. He explained:

"When it is realized that the leaders of the Nazi government are, many of them, drug addicts, certified lunatics, or persons who have been involved in extremely unfavorable scandals before the courts, some explanation of the sadistic developments in Germany may be given."

Lord Marley's description of conditions in Germany moved an audience at a luncheon meeting yesterday, in Kaufmann's, to contribute $1,500 which was described as one of the largest luncheon contributions he has yet received.

In his opinion, the only way to influence the development of Fascism is to mobolize world opinion, particularly in the United States and England. Stating it is impossible to get expressions of world opinion to the masses in Germany, Lord Marley recommended that Americans inform the German ambassador of their feelings.

WORK OF COMMITTEE

The work of the International Committee for Relief has been first to expose the Fascist government of Germany, according to Lord Marley, although the committee is not supposed to take political interest in the government. But he pointed out:

"It is impossible to uncover the cruelties of Fascism without projecting a strong argument against this form of government."

Possibility of Fascism spreading to the United States was seen by Lord Marley in an interview yesterday in which he criticised President Roosevelt for canceling the air mail contracts without an inquiry.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED

A collection was taken at last night's meeting, and the following resolution, adopted unanimously, was to be sent to the German Embassy in Washington:

"At a protest meting held in Pittsburgh tonight, 1,200 citizens of Pittsburgh, representing every shade of religious and political belief, have unanimously resolved to send you their protest against the atrocities perpetrated by your national government against the many minority elements of your country."

NAME COYNE KIN IN VOTE CASE

The name of Tom Coyne, brother of State Senator James J. Coyne, figures in the testimony in the vote fraud trial of five officials of the election board of the Seventeenth District, Fourth Ward, which continued today before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

They are charged with falsifying and altering ballots cast for candidates for federal offices at the general election in November, 1932. The case will go to the jury Monday.

James A. Finneran, election constable, a defense witness, yesterday testified he ordered Coyne and others from the voting places in the Holmes School, when the polls closed at 7 p. m.

In rebuttal, the prosecution called Robert M. Murray and Lawrence L. Murray, son and father, who were Democratic watchers. They testified it was 10 to 15 minutes after the polls closed before Coyne left, but on cross examination by Attorney John A. Frankel, they said he left before the ballot box was opened to begin the tally.

The defendants, James R. Shields, judge; James McTighe and Thomas A. Nordheim, inspectors, and Thomas Holleran and John J. Whalen, clerks, testified they altered no ballots. Several defense witnesses said they watched the board making its count of ballots through large windows on the side of the building, and saw nothing wrong on the part of members of the board or others.

The closing addresses by government and defense counsel and charge by the court will be made Monday morning.

Hazelwood Woman Hurt in Auto Crash

Mrs. Martha Finch, 30, of 303 Park way, Hazelwood, was in Homestead Hospital today suffering face lacerations received in an automobile accident on Brown's Bridge yesterday. The automobile in which she was riding with her husband, Charles Finch, collided head-on with a machine driven by Louis T. Bock, of 3136 State street, McKeesport, according to police.

Flier Forced Down At Conneaut Lake

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Hemmed in on all sides by snowstorms, Robert Fogg, of Miami Beach, Fla., put his plane down on Conneaut Lake, near here, yesterday afternoon in a forced landing.

En route from Florida to Stanford, Me., Fogg, a transport pilot, left Cleveland early in the afternoon with his passenger, Elmer Ward, of Stanford.

Suicide of Young Wife Blamed On Quarrel

A quarrel with her husband caused the suicide of pretty Mrs Carrie Moser, 21, 17 Third street, Clairton, county detectives who investigated her death reported today.

Coroner William J. McGregor ordered an autopsy yesterday, performed by Dr. J. W. McMeans. A bullet fired through her heart from a .22 caliber gun was the cause of death, he reported.

County detectives and Deputy Coroner James L. Davidson questioned Paul M. Moser, the husband, at the home. While he was in the kitchen getting a match he heard a shot and ran to find his wife dying on the bedroom floor, the gun at her side, he told detectives in a signed statement.

Mrs. Moser was the mother of a baby daughter, Marilyn, who was playing in the nursery when the shot was fired.

WHITNEY DENIES PROPAGANDA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—A raging controversy over "propaganda" charges delayed today the windup of the Senate's two-year investigation of the stock market.

Richard Whitney, head of New York's "big board," issued last night a sharp denial that the exchange is flooding the country with "propaganda" against the Fletcher-Rayburn bill for government control of the exchange.

If his efforts to defeat the measure are propaganda, he said, then the constitutional right of free speech is dead.

In reply, Senate investigators pointed to fresh testimony that the New York Exchange spent $1,000,000 in less than five years for publicity purposes.

The Senate committee had intended to close its inquiry—temporarily at least—with yesterday's session. But the "propaganda" controversy spoiled that plan. More testimony will be taken Monday.

WOMAN ROBBED OF PAYROLL

Three motor bandits who held up Mrs. Eleanor Lennon, of 1116 Jancey street, and robbed her of a $325 payroll she was carrying to her father's office in Etna late yesterday, were sought by police today.

The bandit car forced Mrs. Lennon's car to the curb at Morningside avenue and Vilsack street. Two men leaped out and pointed revolvers at Mrs. Lennon and her daughter, Ruth Eleanor, 9. They snatched the payroll and Mrs. Lennon's purse containing $17, leaped into their automobile and sped away.

Mrs. Lennon was taking the payroll to her father, Harry Eibel, president of the Eibel Transfer Company, 71 Sycamore street, Etna.

M'NAIR BACKED ON 5-CENT FARE

Indorsement of Mayor McNair's stand on a five-cent street car fare was made by the Mt. Lebanon Democratic party at a special meeting in the Washington School last night, according to Emerson Smith, secretary.

Smith said that the Mt. Lebanon Community Service Committee was directed to request the Mt. Lebanon Board of Township Commissioners to co-operate with the Democratic bloc in City Council toward securing a reduced fare rate and improved service.

Letters directed to the heads of all boroughs and townships which fall under the one-fare zone, informing them of the action of the Mt. Lebanon group and asking their co-operation, will be sent, Smith said.

When you observe Gov. Talmadge's concentrated look, and powerful lower jaw, you know that the farmers of Georgia elected somebody.

Farmers did it, for the Governor did not carry a single city or town big enough to have paved streets or street car tracks. Many citizens, highly respectable, do not approve him.

But he has reduced the cost of electric light, gas, power and telephone and cut the price of an automobile license to three dollars. Many Georgians approve of all that.

GOV. TALMADGE'S motto is:

"Keep the government poor and you will keep it honest."

He says that when you allow a government to collect vast sums of money there will always be politicians to steal it. Washington might think about that.

The Governor, for farm relief, would have the farmers stop all work every seventh year, except production of milk, eggs, watermelons, peaches and other perishable necessities.

This would give consumers a chance to use farm surplus, and according to Gov. Talmadge, in the farmers' "sabbatical year" the boll weevil and other agricultural pests would die out because they could not go a whole year without anything to eat. At least they would be so much weakened, that they could not catch up for the next six years, to be as much of a nuisance as heretofore.

That seventh year of idleness the farmer would devote to "politics," barbecues, running around to see his neighbors, motoring through the country and getting younger.

DIVINE COMMAND orders the individual to rest one day in seven. Common sense, according to Gov. Talmadge, tells the farmers to rest one year in seven.

In addition, says Gov. Talmadge, the farmers need more, better, and cheaper fertilizer and cheaper transportation.

SEA SEARCHED FOR LST MAIL AVIATORS

Lieut. James H. Rothrock, pilot, and Lieut. William S. Pocock, Jr., were rescued by a Navy destroyer after they had clung to the partly submerged plane for five hours in the pounding sea.

According to reports, engine trouble compelled the officers to make a forced landing in the sea. Shortly before it descended, the plane, its motor stuttering, was sighted by CWA workers on the beach, who notified police.

A police plane rushed to the rescue. The account of the attempted rescue by Patrolman Schmidt, according to a Universal Service report, follows:

"We circled over the plane, flying low enough to be able to distinguish three men. They were all waving their hands. We landed on the surf, but the sea was so rough we could only get within 75 feet of the plane.

"We tried to get up in the air again, but the water that was washing over us froze on the airplane. Our controls were so frozen we couldn't move them."

Schmidt taxied his plane ashore.

ARMY PLANE WRECKED

The Army plane was a wreck. Both motors had been cut, although it could not be learned whether this had been done by the fliers to keep the craft afloat or whether they had been pounded off by the sea.

The Navy destroyer Bernadou later picked up Pocock and Rothrock. Lieut. McDermott couldn't be found. One of the aviators told how he was washed overboard by an icy wave after he had struggled unsuccessfully to grasp a wireless antenna on the tail of the ship.

His companions, in their heavy flyinfi suits and weakened by five hours of exposure, were powerless to assist him.

Two years ago, while a cadet at Randolph Field, San Antonio, Tex., Lieut. McDermott narrowly escaped death. He fell from his plane while practicing rolls, but his parachute carried him to safety.

Four years ago he gave up the study of dentistry here to take up aviation. According to his twin brother, James, George learned the rudiments of aviation while engaged with a refining company here.

He joined the Army two years ago, and was graduated from Kelly Field as a pilot. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John McDermott. His father is a steel worker.

At Everett, Pa., two Army pilots on their way to Pittsburgh for reserve duty lost their way and were forced down. The pilots, Lieut. Paul Shanahan and Corp. Daniel Moler, flying separate planes, were uninjured, but one of the planes wase slightly damaged.

MAYOR ADMITS HE'S POLITICIAN

Mayor McNair admitted to 200 men and boys last night that he was a politician.

Speaking at the annual father and son dinner of the McMasters Methodist Episcopal Church, Turtle Creek, the Mayor said:

"When I started out to be Mayor I was a lawyer, but now that I'm getting h—— regularly I consider myself a politician."

To make the Mayor feel at home, the Rev. R. N. Richards presented him with a red apple. Just before he waded into a discussion of the single tax, his cure-all for economic evils, Mayor McNair took a cut at Senator Coyne, saying:

"To become Mayor a boy must first learn to add. Learn that two and two make four and not five, as Jimmy Coyne believes."

FARLEY, BROWN TO CLASH AT HEARING

'Personal Remark' to Bring Postal Chiefs Face to Face

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—A present and a past Postmaster General—each having denied the other's statement—today were called to thrash out face to face whether they had exchanged a now famous "personal remark."

The principals were James A. Farley, of the Roosevelt cabinet, who had earlier denied making it, and Walter F. Brown, of the Hoover regime, who said he did.

The "personal remark" itself was still a secret as the Senate mail investigating committee—marked as the meeting ground—gathered for a session that in itself promised to shatter all recent precedent.

In fact, Chairman Black, about whom Brown said the "remark" was made, broke a record or two when he asked both men to be present. Brown is the first Hoover cabineteer to make a capitol appearance during the seventy-third Congress. Not in years have a present and past cabinet officer thus been called to face each other.

Personalities tended to outshine other developments in the tangle over airmail and Army-Navy airplane contracts.

Nevertheless word circulated at the Capitol that President Roosevelt was swiftly shaping a still-concealed plan for rebidding on air mail contracts. Private industry under it would again take over the job.

Brown, on the witness stand for the fifth day yesterday, told of going to Farley's office to deliver "missing" official records. He quoted the present Postmaster General as saying there about the Black investigations:

"You know I haven't any sympathy with these political investigations anyhow."

Brown said he couldn't repeat the "remark of a personal nature" Farley then made about Black because Farley "asked me not to." But he would if Farley gave him permission.

STEEL WORKERS PROTEST POLL

A delegation claiming representation of 100,000 steel workers protested to the National Labor Board at Washington that steel companies had sprung a new election on them to put company unions on a more permanent basis, according to an Associated Press dispatch today.

The delegation, headed by Earl J. Forbeck, president of District No. 1, of the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, presented a letter announcing the election yesterday at the Duquesne plant of the Carnegie Steel Company, and stated similar elections were scheduled for other plants in the district.

The delegation protested and asked the board for instructions to obtain an election supervised by the board. The protest was taken under advisement.

Tabulation of ballots cast by employes of the United States Steel Corporation at the Clairton steel works and furnaces and the Clairton by-products coke works of the Carnegie Steel Company, yesterday, was to be completed today.

The employes were voting on revision of company union rules, one of which proposes a change in recalling employes' representatives.

Company officials asserted they took no part in conducting the election. Officials of the local Amalgamated Union said their members were not participating.

HEINZ EXPANDS LOCAL PLANT

The H. J. Heinz Company is enlarging production facilities at its main plant in Pittsburgh and also at branches in Bowling Green, O., and Medina, N. Y. More people are now employed at the Pittsburgh plant than ever before.

Additional kitchens are being installed at Pittsburgh to meet a rapidly growing demand for soups, sales of some of which have been largely in excess of plant capacity despite the fact that this department is working on double shifts. At Medina, special kitchens are being installed for the preparation of strained foods, and tomato products equipment is being increased. The company has completed the purchase of properties adjoining its Bowling Green factory and increased switching facilities to about a mile and warehouse space by 50,000 square feet.

Divorce Seeker

THELMA TODD

STAR CHARGES CRUELTY

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Thelma Todd, the little Massachusetts teacher who won a beauty contest, leaped into films and then eloped to Arizona, filed suit yesterday for divorce from Pasquala De Cicco, theatrical agent.

The motion picture comedienne charged that the romantic trip to Prescott, Ariz., July 10, 1932, for a quiet wedding ended in disillusionment, disclosing incompatability, and resulted in extreme cruelty. She said:

"We just couldn't make a go of it, and there's no use trying any more. We are both agreed to that."

HUGE LOAN MAY BLOCK CUTS OF PAYROLL

Borrowing $4,500,000 Considered to Fund City Deficit

City Council, in closed sessions, is considering borrowingn $4,500,000 to balance the budget, fund the city deficit and build modern incineration plants.

Both Republican and Democratic factions in Council are against cutting the payroll, and are looking for more revenue as the answer.

With Mayor McNair growing cool toward the idea of a municipal survey by industrial leaders, Councilman William A. Magee has a resolution authorizing it ready to introduce Monday.

The idea, followed in Baltimore, is to bring business experts here to study methods used by Pittsburgh city employes and revise where necessary. The business men would serve without charge.

GIVES MAYOR CREDIT

Mayor McNair says it was Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, and not the business leaders who were responsible for the success of the plan there.

Council is attempting to strenghten its borrowing power by taking credit for a portion of the city's $15,000,000 in delinquent taxes as solvent debts, just as is done in the case of an unpaid paving assessment.

KERR CONSULTED

Controller James P. Kerr has been called into conference regarding the possibilities of borrowing $2,500,000 to cover the deficit, $1,000,000 toward balancing the budget and $1,000,000 for incineration plants.

Many of the budget-balancing suggestions of Mrs. R. Templeton Smith have been rejected by Council. Some have been rejected by directors, and in instances where the directors have agreed to reductions, they have gone back to Council and asked for the money for other purposes.

The budget is $1,500,000 out of balance, according to the latest estimates.

Weather Conditions.

An area of high pressure extends from the Canadian Northwest (Prince Albert, Sask., and Edmonton, Alberta, 30.64), southeastward to the South Atlantic coast, with a secondary center over West Virginia (Parkersburg, 30.50), while the southwestern disturbance is central over Western Colorado (Grand Junction, 29.64), and Northern Arizona (Flagstaff, 29.64). Weather continues generally fair over the country east of the Mississippi and over most of the Canadian Northwest, but it is snowing in the Northern Rocky Mountains, the western plains and eastward into Missouri, and raining in Texas this morning. It is colder in the lower lakes, New England, the Ohio Valley and Middle Atlantic states, and warmer in the west Gulf states and the western plains.

River Conditions.

The rivers are frozen over this morning everywhere in the Pittsburgh district. On the Monongahela ice is now five inches thick from Locks Nos. 4 to 7 and six to seven inches thick above No. 7. On the Allegheny it is eight inches thick at Lock No. 4, and from Lock No. 5 up it ranges from 13 to 14½ inches thick. In the Pittsburgh harbor most of the ice was made last night, and is less than an inch thick.

Mayor Makes Clubs Pay For Dance Permits

Although Mayor McNair has frowned on forcing collections for dance permits from non-profit organizations, prosperity has descended upon the dance permit division of the Mayor's office.

Receipts since January 2 have amounted to $1,387, an increase of $850 over the same period last year.

Although lenient toward churches and veteran organizations, the Mayor has "cracked down" on the professional dance halls, clubs and cabarets. City Detective Stewart S. Dapp has been notifying the proprietors.

Among the organizations which have been billed for a $15 license fee and $1 for each dance are the Pittsburgh Athletic Association and the Pittsburgh Country Club.

SOLES ACQUITTED BY WIFE MURDER TRIAL JURY

CAMERA:
Sun-Telegraph

La Roux Soles—She died in McKeesport Hospital 36 hours after she was shot. Slim, tallish and 42. Mother of two children. One died at birth, other died at age of 2. Married Bob Soles shortly after he returned from France and the war. Her mother died less than five years ago.

Bob Soles—The defendant. In his early forties. Medium-sized, medium weight, wears glasses, has tan complexion, makes smart appearance. Member of one of McKeesport's oldest families which has many profitable interests, including zipper company at Meadville.

Harry B. Lynch—Father of La Roux Soles. He persisted, even after Coroner's jury had voted suicide, in investigation which resulted in arrest of his son-in-law. Frail, stooped and gray-haired at 68. Retired few years ago as superintendent of McKeesport mill. Lived with the Soleses, and was asleep in house when La Roux was shot. Was state's star witness.

Rose Hardy—Good friend of Soles whom he started visiting six months before his wife was shot. Lived in apartment above his McKeesport office. In early forties, attractive blonde, nurse, widow and mother of one son. Daughter of the late Dave Hardy, one of McKeesport's most prominent politicians.

William Sibley Martin—Not too prosperous real estate man of Teaneck, N. J. Star witness for the defense. Testified he met La Roux Soles "on the beach" at Miami. Told of close association with her and later asking for $40 with which to pay an anticipated hospital bill. Said he hitch-hiked north from Miami after La Roux had left there.

CROWD APPROVES VERDICT, WITH DEATH OF LA ROUX REMAINING MYSTERY

"Who shall answer for you?"
"Our foreman."

In a clear, strong voice that rang through the courtroom and into the corridor, the comely forewoman, Miss McCloskey said:

"Not guilty."

Soles' face was like a sheet. He trembled and sat down immediately.

He was led to the assignment room where he later was freed.

Confusion ruled for a moment. Several women had difficulty restraining their emotions. Spectators and attorneys rushed to congratulate Eaton and Coleman.

The freed man's two brothers, T. Frank Soles, an attorney, and Lou Soles, who flew here from the West Coast to attend the trial, were present when the verdict was read.

The former's face broke into smiles. The latter flushed. They said nothing to their freed brother.

H. B. Lynch, father of La Roux Soles, who had wept when Prosecutor Haggerty referred to him as a "good old Irishman who didn't want his daughter to be branded as a suicide" was not in court.

DEFENSE COUNSEL ELATED

Eaton, elated, went promptly to join Soles in the assignment room. Crisply he said:

"No other verdict would have stood."

Assistant Prosecutor Clunk asked the court to quash an indictment charging Soles with involuntary manslaughter. This was done.

Judge Patterson thanked the jury and dismissed them. They filed out, obtained their luggage in the jury room, collected $90 each from the County Treasurer and started homeward, visibly happy that the ordeal was over.

Attorney Coleman said:

Forced to forego the regular lunch hour because of the length of those arguments, the jurors ate their belated mid-day meal after 1 o'clock yesterday and were back in the jury box at 2:15. Judge Patterson began his charge at 2:20.

"A careful study of the jury during the trial and especially their favorable reaction to the pleas in behalf of the defendant, caused me to feel confident that a verdict of not guilty would be rendered. It is my belief that it was a proper verdict and the defendant concerned was in no manner involved in the shooting of his wife."

Miss McCloskey, whose few words made Soles a free man, asked about her experience, replied:

"I enjoyed it."

She would not discuss the case.

JUDGE DELIBERATE

In an even, calm, unhurried tone he spoke impersonally and quite formally. Deep in attention, the six men and six women leaned forward in their seats, following in detail the court's instructions.

As soon as the judge finished, a tipstaff called upon spectators and counsel to remain seated. The tipstaves assigned to the jury took their places fore and aft as the venire passed quietly in a single file out of the jury box and out through a rear door for the jury room.

SOLES WATCHES JURY

Soles, slumped in his chair alongside the counsel table, followed the jury with his eyes. His facial expression did not change. He did not even turn his head. In his eyes appeared momentarily a gleam—a gleam of hope.

With those 12 men and women into the jury room went that hope—a hope for acquittal.

He shivered almost imperceptibly.

Soles leaned forward to speak a word with his counsel, then stood. He strode out of the room in custody of a deputy sheriff—back to his cell in the county jail to await the jury's finding.

COLEMAN ELOQUENT

Closing arguments lasted nearly three hours. Attorney Eaton made a brief speech of thanks for the defense, following which Attorney Coleman launched into an impassioned plea.

Alternately weeping and stamping his feet, Coleman built up a dramatic appeal for acquittal. Of La Roux's death, he declared:

"Morbid love destroys virtue, leads to disaster."

For the defendant, he pleaded:

HAGGERTY URGES JUSTICE

Prosecutor Haggerty, less demonstrative, but none the less dramatic, made a plea for justice to "vindicate the good name of a good woman" and "bring her slayer to justice."

He thundered:

"The name Soles and the money and everything else mean nothing in this Criminal Court. Everyone is on the same footing. Our job is not to get scared at a million-dollar defense, nor at high-powered words."

At the conclusion of arguments, Eaton interposed an objection to remarks by Haggerty to the jury. He had previously asked that a stenographer be assigned to take down the prosecutor's speech.

Haggerty reminded defense counsel that just an objection was out of order and that it would have to be in the form of a motion to withdraw a juror.

Eaton made the motion, but Judge Patterson refused it and granted an exception—a necessary procedure which would be the basis for an appeal in case of conviction.

Mrs. Soles died in McKeesport Hospital last June 20, some 36 hours after she had been shot. She was found dying on her twin-bed in the well-furnished Soles home in Jenny Lind street, McKeesport.

DEFENDANT'S STORY

Soles' story was that he came home, shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning, walked into the bedroom and heard his wife groaning.

During the dramatic five hours he was on the witness stand he explained that he thought his wife had indigestion again—indigestion ascribed to something she ate in York, Pa., where they stopped on the return from a four-week vacation in Atlantic City.

He testified he then went to the bathroom with the comic strips and the Sunday paper for 25 minutes.

When he returned to the bedroom, he said, he discovered his wife had been dying all those minutes, a bullet wound below the heart. He testified that he called upstairs to his father-in law, the elderly Lynch.

But the state contended otherwise. The state contended that Soles came home from the apartment of Rose Hardy, who lived above Soles' real estate office, that he had been drinking, that La Roux Soles, waiting for him, accused him of being out with another woman.

Then, so Prosecutor Haggerty charged, Soles became infuriated, snatched his .38 caliber Army pistol from the top drawer of a chifforobe and fired at his wife.

FATHER NEMESIS

This was in June. The Coroner's jury voted the death a suicide but La Roux's father, retired mill superintendent, persisted in an investigation which in October caused Soles' arrest.

Soles signed a "confession," in which, pleading a hazy, drunken memory, he said that he "must have" fired the shot.

During the trial he repudiated the statement; he said he had at the time told Park it was "a pack of lies." He charged he was given the third degree. But in his charge Judge Patterson told the jury to ignore implications of the third degree—presumably because this has not been proved.

NURSE TELLS STORY

Besides the "confession" Haggerty depended upon three other important pieces of testimony. One was the story of Mr. Lynch, who testified that, when he accused Soles of the shooting after he had been aroused from bed, Soles was silent. Another was the testimony of Alice Brown, McKeesport Hospital nurse, who said that Soles had said to her:

"Let her die."

The third was the contention that Soles had tried to bribe two McKeesport policemen who investigated the shooting and had offered money to nurses at the hospital.

EXPLAINS REMARK

Soles' explanation of his utterance to Miss Brown was that his wife was in great pain.

His explanation of his wife's death was that she was a psychoneurotic, that she had been ill physically and depressed mentally for years.

He testified that she had told him she tried to commit suicide by poisoning last winter in Florida.

CALLS HER UNTRUE

And it was Soles alone who testified that his wife was untrue to him. He said that she had confessed, a few months before the shooting, to a "weak moment" with one William Sibley Martin, an impoverished real estate man of Teaneck, N. J., whom she had met in Miami.

Soles offered this as another reason for La Roux's suicide. She and Martin had made numerous trips to a doctor together, according to the testimony.

Martin himself was produced as a witness. He said he had met La Roux on the beach at Miami. He told of the visits. He told of writing her later for $40 with which to go to a hospital for rheumatism. He said he eventually hitch-hiked North.

BLAZE BATTLED ON HIGH TANK

With the temperature near zero, firemen battled a blaze 100 feet high on a water tank of the Pittsburg Water Heater Company, 193 Chartiers avenue, East Carnegie, early today.

The fire started many feet above the ground in the wooden casing covering the pipes to the tank. When firemen reached the scene the fire had spread to the wooden housing of the tank.

Pittsburgh and East Carnegie fire companies fought the flames for two hours. Damage was estimated at $500.

SOLES SMILES CALMLY AT VERDICT

First Objective Now Will Be Visit To Mother

the courthouse with his attorney, O. K. Eaton, and his two brothers, Lou and Scott Soles, for the attorney's offices in the Union Trust Building.

From the time he left the courtroom Soles was besieged with well wishers—more than 50 of them, some of them acquaintances, the majority of them strangers.

To newspapermen who pressed him for a statement, he replied:

"Not just now. I probably will later."

He passed a newsstand in front of the Union Trust Building, noted the Sun-Telegraph extras proclaiming his acquittal and remarked:

"That's fast work."

When he arrived in Eaton's office the telephone was ringing. It was Mayor Lysle, of McKeesport. He wanted to talk to Soles. Soles talked to him. Here is Soles' end of the conversation:

"Hello, Mayor . . . Fine? . . . Me, too . . . I'm awfully glad you all are . . . You bet it is . . . They pled hard for me . . . I'll see you in a couple of days."

TALKS SELF HOARSE

Pressed again for a statement, he replied:

"I don't care to make any statement. I already have talked myself hoarse."

And then they asked him what everybody wanted to know—did he sleep well last night?

He did. He said:

"I had a solid night's sleep. No, there was about an hour that I didn't sleep. There was a noise in the jail."

Then laughingly he said:

"That's a fib" (referring to the jail noise).

Asked his plans, he said:

"I have no plans except to go home and get used to the old home life.

"The first thing I am going to do is to go out and see my mother in McKeesport. I haven't seen her in five months."

Mrs. Soles is buried temporarily in a vault in a mausoleum. Asked where she would be buried permanently, Soles replied:

"That's up to Mr. Lynch (her father)."

It was brought out before that Lynch wanted his daughter buried beside her mother in Lewisville, Ind.

The next question they asked him was:

"What about marriage?"

SOLES IN GOOD HUMOR

And Soles answered good humoredly enough:

"Don't say anything about women."

Soles was in a good humor.

The following statement was issued by Eaton:

"I never had the slightest doubt that Mr. Soles would be acquitted when his full defense was presented. In my opinion his frank attitude as a witness in the clear testimony he gave did more towards convincing the jury than all other testimony in the case. Of course, he's pleased with the verdict."

NO RELIEF SEEN IN COLD WAVE

In outlying districts temperatures ranging from 2 below to 5 above were recorded.

Fair and continued cold weather were forecast for tonight, with the temperature still hovering around zero. Slight moderation may occur tomorrow Observer W. S. Brotzman indicated, with a possibility of snow arriving from the southwest.

Huge Plane Lost in Blizzard

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Fear for the lives of eight persons grew today as a wide search was organized for a United Air Lines transport plane lost in a raging mountain blizzard and fog.

The plane, carrying five passengers and a crew of three from Salt Lake City toward Cheyenne, Wyo., failed to reach there on schedule late Thursday. Officials said it must have come down Thursday night, probably somewhere near here.

This belief hung on the report of a Japanese section foreman, who said that the plane, frantically calling for directions, passed over his shack at Emery, Utah, at 3 p. m., Thursday.

LYNCH ASLEEP AT VERDICT

Harry B. Lynch, the 69-year-old father of La Roux Soles . . . the man who instigated the investigation which eventually led to his son-in-law's arraignment on a murder charge, was still asleep in his room at the Pittsburgher Hotel several hours after the verdict acquitting Soles had been reached.

A newspaper reporter's call to his hotel room was answered by William Dunn, Miami attorney. He, too, expressed surprise that a verdict had been reached. He said:

"No, I hadn't heard. I have no comments to make. No, Mr. Lynch has never said what he expected the verdict to be."

DAN SMITH
© 1934 King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved

While Israel was at war with Ammon and David tarried in Jerusalem, David at eveningtide rose from his bed and walked upon the roof, and from there he saw a woman washing herself, and she was very beautiful.

And the woman was Bathsheba, wife of Uriah the Hittite. And David sent an order that Joab should put Uriah in the front of battle. And when Bathsheba heard that Uriah was dead she mourned for her husband.

Of the sons of David, Absalom became wroth with Ammon who had sorely offended Tamar, the sister of Absalom; and at a sheepshearing feast Absalom's servants slew Ammon when he was merry with wine.

Then Absalom fled, but after he had dwelt three years in Geshur, David granted Joab's plea that Absalom might return. And in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty.

FAMOUS POET PRAISES RUSHMORE PLAN

Edwin Markham and Russell Patterson Laud Project

Leaders of American letters and arts continued yesterday to reflect the wide interest taken in the contest announced by the Hearst newspapers to obtain inscriptions for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

Edwin Markham, famous poet, and Russell Patterson, illustrator and scenic designer, were among the group of writers and artists who yesterday joined in applauding the project.

Calling Gutzon Borglum, sculptor of the monument, a trail blazer in his chosen medium, Patterson asserted the contest had outstanding purpose and significance.

LETTERS 13 FEET HIGH

On the other side of the rugged peak he will engrave 600 words of inscriptions in letters 13 feet high. They will deal with the nine principal events in the development of American history.

These include the writing of the Declaration of Independence; the drafting of the Constitution; the purchase of Louisiana and the ceding of the Floridas to the United States.

Other episodes are the rise of the republic of Texas and its entry as a state; the Mexican War and the acquisition of California; the settlement of the Oregon boundary dispute; the Alaska purchase, and the building of the Panama Canal.

It is for these epochal happenings that the 600 words of inscriptions are being sought.

Mr. Borglum and the Rushmore National Memorial Commission headed by Fred W. Sargent, of Chicago, are inviting men, women and school children throughout the country to join in writing the inscriptions through the competition inaugurated for this purpose by the Hearst newspapers on Washington's birthday.

COMMITTEES FORMING

A national committee is being formed to pass final judgment on the texts submitted in this tournament of American expression.

Local committees will do the initial work of elimination with the entries, reserving the best for the national committee.

The country's foremost historians, poets, authors and men of affairs will make up the personnel of the local and national committees.

Cash and scholarship prizes will be offered the contestants in addition to the distinction of having the texts subjects for possible selection and perpetuation in the granite of the monument.

There will also be gold, silver and bronze medals designed by Borglum as well as certificates of merit for contestants.

For the next eight days the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will carry details of the plans and developments of the national competition. These will be supplemented by special articles on aspects of the Rushmore National Memorial.

A detailed exposition of the contest, its rules and prizes will be published on Sunday, March 4.

Patriotic Hands Should Write Texts, Says Poet

By EDWIN MARKHAM

Famous poet, author of "The Man With the Hoe" and other works

A heroic work of art such as the Rushmore National Memorial in the black hills of South Dakota should be invested with added significance by inscriptions written by patriotic hands.

Noble deeds incite men to moving words, and no country has a richer historic pageant to inspire its sons and daughters than the United States.

From the father of the republic down to the present era, leaders of the American people have exalted us with words as well as deeds. One of Lincolns letters is framed on the wall at Oxford, and this and other utterances of our statesmen will live as long as English is spoken by the sons of men.

Leaders who kindle such admiration in far-off lands provide challenging motives for the paens of their own American descendants.

Illustrator Halls Borglum as Pioneer

By RUSSELL PATTERSON

Magazine Illustrator and Science Designer

The Rushmore National Memorial is a massive conception and is expressive of contemporary America. Sculpture, like any other of the arts, is more widely assimilated when it is brought nearer the life of the people.

In this respect the Rushmore mountain monument will have singular distinction. The frame for it is unique, and having the people of the country join in helping to compose the inscriptions should add to the force of its appeal.

Borglum, the sculptor, is a genuine trail blazer in his chosen medium. He plans with nobility and strength, and this memorial in the hills of South Dakota should be most impressive.

The Hearst newspapers are to applauded for sponsoring this contest to spread interest in the monument among the people. The project strikes me as one having purpose and real significance.

National Committee Formed to Judge Contest Texts

Borglum Elated At Contest Response

Gutzon Borglum, under whose guiding hand the Mount Rushmore National Memorial is taking shape in the Black Hills of South Dakota, yesterday expressed himself as highly elated at the enthusiastic response throughout the nation to the competition sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Hearst newspapers to secure the text for the inscription to be carved on the mountain depicting the progress and the development of the United States.

As comments poured in from leading personalities from all parts of the country, the internationally famous sculptor was busily completing plans to finish the figure of Thomas Jefferson on the memorial this summer.

HEROIC WORK

At Washington today he said:

"I am extremely gratified at the splendid response to this great movement. We are undertaking an heroic and patriotic work that will live throughout the ages. Because of that I earnestly urge the best efforts of all American citizens to aid us in this great cause.

"Regardless of the remuneration the winner or winners may receive in this movement, the competition offers a chance for some American citizen to have his thought engraved forever in the history of this great republic."

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

This much heralded garden exhibit the Garden Club of Allegheny County, with the aid of the Fine Arts Department of Carnegie Institute, is arranging now in the Carnegie Institute galleries for the March 1 opening, is not the first exhibit of the kind held in Pittsburgh!

Twelve years ago the Garden Club of Allegheny County presented a similar exhibit, described as art and science in gardens. And everyone who saw the early exhibit was delighted with it, I learn. The entire exhibit to open March 1 and continue until April 1 will have as its inspiration flowers and gardens in art and decoration.

Here is a big difference between this exhibit to open shortly and the one of 12 years ago—everything to be used in the exhibition comes from Allegheny County; that is, everything shown will be the property of folks living right here.

Everything in Garden Exhibit From County

In the earlier exhibition there were no geographical restrictions to hamper the committee's flights of fancy.

Here's something for Pittsburgh to be especially proud of — in other cities similar exhibits have always been undertaken professionally by a museum or gallery. To be sure the Carnegie Institute Fine Arts' department and Museum are helping, but the Garden Club is responsible for the coming exhibit.

Flowers in art did not play a part in the life of the early ages. According to the Carnegie Magazine, it wasn't until the latter part of the Middle Ages that signs of appreciation of the beauty in plants and signs of an effort to portray flowers naturally in the growing state appeared.

Garden Today Has Reached High Point

Today, the garden, and all that goes with it, has, according to authorities, attained its highest point of development and popularity.

Among the many valuable ings to be displayed in the exbit will be three floral paintings Mrs. James D. Hailman, famed tsburgh painter, which have ver been shown to the public fore.

Six Little Girls Play On Ancient Psaltery

Six little girls at the Maxada School Center avenue, have an intriguing new study—they are learning to play the psaltery. The psaltery, a 15 string instrument resembling the zither, was known in Asia many years ago. It was used by the ancient Hebrews.

The six intent young pupils are Audrey Jean Border, Mary Anne McHugh, Louise Shanahan, Nadine Coffman, Isabelle O'Conner and Patty Coffman.

Not only are they already laying tunes on the psalteries, but they are writing poems to set to music to play later on! Here's a lyric by little Nadine Coffman pictured in the group above. It's entitled "Night."

"Children all must go to sleep,
They must not let their bright eyes peep.
The stars that shine up above
On and on they must shove.
You must go in a doze
And keep your eyes closed.
When the sun comes out at day
You must get up to play.
You always must do what's right.

SPRING HATS FOR WINTER COATS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

There is a new fillip to this upturned black felt hat where the crown is cut and draped to a coronet effect. This detail is set high up around the crown, and its ends tied in back.

MOST WOMEN buy a black hat for their first tryout of spring millinery, probably because every woman gets at least one black spring gown with lingerie touches, and because black coats of cloth or fur are ubiquitous. Also there is many a brilliant flower print that looks dumb unless it is accented by a dark hat, and this season we are getting plenty of black-and-bright prints.

PERHAPS THE most alluring of the new black hats is that model which has a swashbuckling, cavalier sweep to its off-the-face brim. The model sketched at the bottom of this group of wearable hats is such a one. It is a grand hat to jack up the rather utilitarian frock when it must go to tea in public, and in spite of its generous size effect, it is still a perfectly comfortable hat for tea dancing. (That interesting indoor sport has been revived since repeal came back.)

The crisp attitudes and the luxurious swish of taffeta are dematching crop of silk, sometimes it is a bright contrasting plaid, tails that accompany many new black hats. Sometimes it is a Again it may be a delicate pastel in the Fragonard feeling that is used. It is all very windblown in effect, which is to say that the ayes have it for hats that employ this device.

COCKADES, THOSE pin wheels and quills of plaited ribbon, are another great favorite for the all-black hat. White is used a lot, alone or combined with black ribbon; red and blue together or separately is another good choice, and it is by these means that a hat can be more surely than ever tied up to the frock with which it is worn.

The third big department of trimmings for these hats are in the flower garden. Gardenias bloom perennially on black hats for spring. There are ever so many tiny flowers used in nosegay and severe wreath effect, too—such blossoms as forgetmenots, violets, mauve and white, and lantana.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS! :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Youngsters Should Beware Of Unworthy Influences

A young fellow of 18 says he is all washed up on being good.

It is the crooked ones who get along.

And he seems to know. For he says he lives in a neighborhood where everybody believes in the survival of the fittest. The house he lives in is an old shack of a place, and he can gaze out on a street where there used to be plenty of "speaks" and plenty of brawls. And also he can spy the belching smoke of the South Side mills, and he says when he thinks of the fellows wasting their lives over there, down under the flames, he feels he'd rather walk straight in past the little green door and have that spark in him snapped out at one whiff than to be buried in hard labor and only a dinner bucket and some sloven for a home-keeper.

Prison looks better to him than a living breadline.

Maybe he hasn't read as much about prisons as I have. Perhaps he did not read the articles on Devil's Island the Sun-Telegraph has been publishing. He never has trekked South and seen the chain gangs in operation.

He says he is simply passing out to get a fling in a big hotel with a shower bath and plenty of towels and a bed with a real mattress on it. If the day ever comes when he can brisk in at a skyscraper swinging door and walk past the orderlies in brass buttons and go up in fast-moving elevators to a rampart of an office, he'll be eating oats, he says.

And he doesn't care how he gets there, either.

I saw Jack Diamond once. It was late at night, just a short time before he was shot in New York City. He was slinking along, looking from right to left out of pale watery eyes, and with body guards all around him. Menacing fellows that no one decent would want as friends.

GLORY IS BRIEF

Fear curdled his features. I wouldn't have been Jack Diamond even for his brief flare of criminal glory. Even though his name is written to this day in big letters on the top rung of gangland.

I have gone into night court when the culprits were being hurdled in, one at a time. There they were, caught in the traps of their own making, and everyone surprised, just like you will be, my lad, the day the big hand of the law gets you.

We are all built in such manner, that we are sure we are the one who will escape. There is a halo around us that never allows the evil day to come; that is what we all fancy.

But it is that devil in us, that whispering, deceitful something that laughs at us hard and long, the day the cloud lowers and we are enmeshed over our heads.

I'm no preacher. Moody never would have given me a place among his blessed. Billy Sunday never would have wanted me up front in his tent. Yet I have seen a thing or two. And I know when I tell you, young man, that you better take yourself in hand and get over your belief in the crooked ways, that I am telling you the right goods

You're lucky to have such an eerie perch in which to live. No matter if squalor is at your door, you have scope of vision. And that is what we all need.

NEARBY THINGS

I have always loved a view. No matter what it was I was looking at, I've eaten it up eagerly. It is the view from the old cabin door that has made Presidents. It is the view from the hut by the seashore that has made good mariners. It is the view from the high perch on the old city hillside that may come back at you, and make you into a real man when you least expect it.

It is the nearby things that get us. So watch out for them. The "speak" that is kept by an old friend. The slot machine that is operated by the woman who comes in at our back door with her apron over her head. Not much harm in a little of all this. But it's "the little of all this" that leads to the big open spaces that are all wrong.

So whither going, young rascal?

Some are lucky. Some are not. But are you absolutely sure of your own good fortune?

The curtains may be ready to be rung down in front of you.

The ground may be sodden, and you may sink in knee deep.

Times are better than they were. There are other places to work than the mills. Bigelow boulevard, if you look down over it, shows many laboring places that might hold a chance for you.

If you start out to find a good landing, you'll get it. But if you start out to be a bum, you'll be one.

But don't make the mistake of looking for a pin in a haystack. It may prick you.

Contract Bridge :-: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

An Elementary Play

"You write so much, Mrs. Culberton, about the fine plays such as squeezes and coups and forced leads that I wonder if you have time for some of the problems which confront a poor player like myself."

This is an extract from a letter I received the other day, and I assume there are a few others who share the writers' feeling. Bridge writers like to discuss the more complicated problems that arise at the Bridge table and forget that the majority of those who read about Bridge have not developed their game to a point where they can master the more intricate type of problem. However, experts, as well as novices often go wrong on such a simple problem as planning the play of the hand.

In a recent rubber game at a bridge club in New York I saw a really fine player go wrong on the play of a hand which was, in its essence, simplicity itself.

East, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

North and South, part-score 70.

♠ AK852

The bidding:

East	South	West	North

West's Opening lead was a small diamond, and East won the trick with the Ace. East then led the nine of Spades. South won with the Ace, and in the subsequent play failed to make the contract to take seven tricks. The question is: How should he have planned the play to fulfill the contract? Even conceding that West held four spades originally, the successful plan is a comparatively simple one. After winning the first spade trick South should lay down a heart—either the Ace or small—and should continue with another round, removing the last heart from Dummy. Now whatever lead is made, a losing heart must be ruffed, provided, of course, there are at least three hearts in the hand of each opponent, and the Declarer will be enabled to enter Dummy for the discard of one losing club on the diamond Queen.

Thus played, regardless of the success of the club finesse, South should make four trumps, including the ruff of a heart, the Ace of hearts, the Queen of diamonds and the club Ace.

In actual play South continued with a second round of trumps, found that West held four, and then was never able to obtain a ruff of his losing heart as West, in the lead on the second round of hearts, drew Dummy's last trump and thereby defeated the contract.

Teach Child to Be Neat

By LISA GRENELLE

"All your life you'll have to dress;
Every single day, unless
You should happen to be sick.
Why not learn to do it quick?
Hang your clothes the proper way.
So you'll find them fresh next day."

Orderly physical habits make for orderly mental habits. For the mind and the body, though possibly not Siamese twins, have a way of playing follow-the-leader from babyhood to old age. What one suggests the other one does. If a ball or a toy appears attractive to Jimmy's mind, his hand instinctively reaches out to possess the ball, although physically the ball will in no way benefit him. If, on the other hand, Jimmy's stomach craves nourishment, Jimmy's mind immediately sets to work figuring out a plan to get hold of the forbidden jam, for the benefit of Jimmy's stomach.

The mind and the body, the closest possible partnership, but a partnership that can be destructive as well as constructive. The mind and the body, bound forever together, can pull against each other, be anything but a beneficial combination. One can drag down and destroy the other; dominate and crush the other.

And one can get the other into bad habits, such as disorderliness.

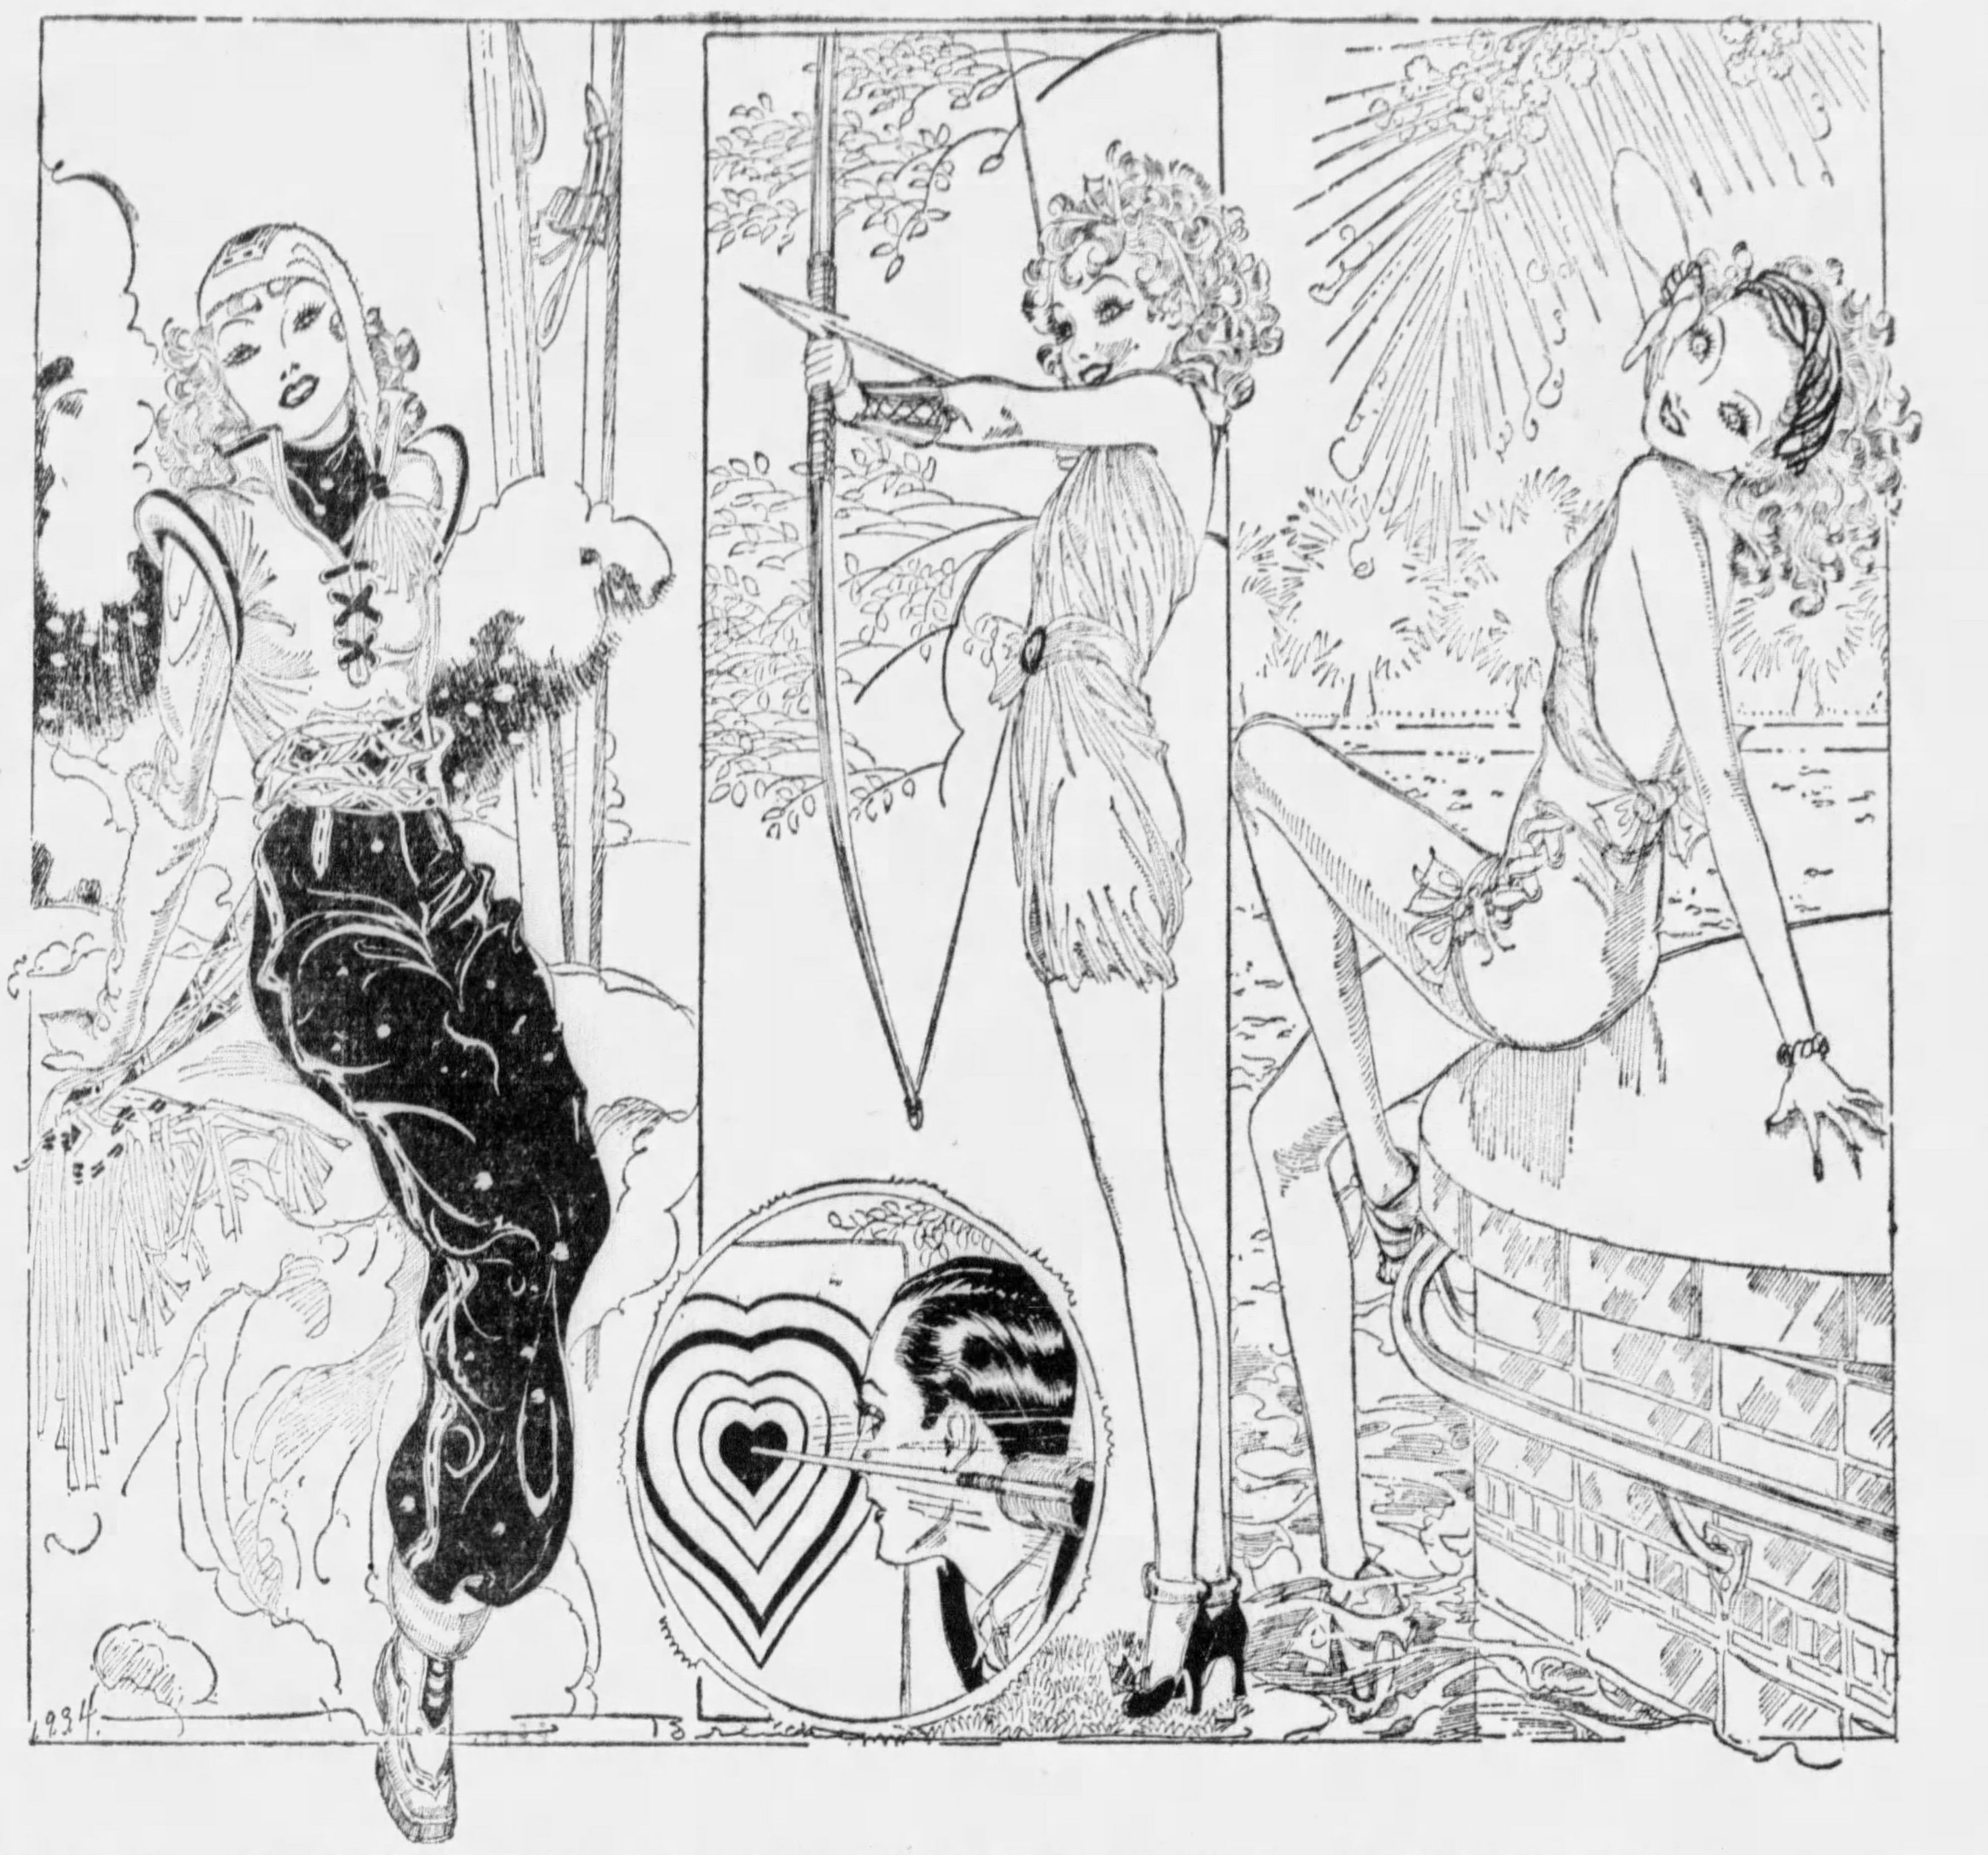
A child who is made to pick up his clothes, to keep his toys in their places, acquires a sense of orderliness, not only physical but mental. He is learning to think of a place for things, and things in their places. He is acquiring a sense of fitness and proportion.

Likewise, untidiness is bound to create a feeling of mental as well as physical confusion. It tends to make everything complicated, even the most simple tasks.

If you come home tired and face an untidy room it increases your fatigue and makes you cross. An untidy nursery has the same effect on a child. And feeling tired and cross is not only disagreeable; it is bad for the health

Tidiness, however, is not natural, except in a very few children. And this requires patience and thought on your part.

'SHE GETS HER MAN' -o- -o- Drawn by Nell Brinkley



"As winter-siren, cuddly in wools, the adorable lines buried in bright ski-pants, the pony-feet lost in inch-thick soled boots, with yet an intriguing rumor of a pretty figure present to the eye—her weapon, a grown-up version of Cupid's famous bow and arrow, gets the center of my heart! So it does when she plays summer-siren too; most of the talked-of figure bared to the sun and water, like a jonquil unburdened of the winter covering. Her bright hair and bright face are the same. Her color and covering schemes are vastly different. In one presentation she wades the icy diamonds of the snow, and blinks in the breath of the Snow-Queen. There are ice dust and frost tinsel on her lashes and hair. In the other she wades jade-green water, with nothing between the real her and the element. She opens her arms to the fiery sun, and comes away from the embrace with the gold of his kiss on her skin. The strained-honey air of summer wind over flower-heads is in her hair. And she gets her man!

"She is very different as the artist makes her, for the two halves of the year when He blows hot and cold; with furs and very much without. But seen this way and that, and countless other decorative impersonations you may see her in—still she gets her man. She is a 'Robin Hood feminine,' and at any distance you can name, if I can see her at all, she neatly divides my heart in half."

Mary's Histrionic Ability Comes in Handy

Would the ruse Mary had planned so cleverly be effective in stopping the investigation of Bill and Hank into the identity of the two people who had just left our kitchen door?

This was the question which beat with crazy insistence against my brain as I saw Bill and Hank dashing toward the kitchen door from Noel's old car, where they had been stationed waiting to give the signal to the merry quartet who were determined to trail the bride and groom.

I shrank behind the door and gave a tense, hoarse, whispered command to the Ticers.

"Quick, both of you, into the laundry and shut the door. Don't come out until I call you."

Mrs. Ticer, quicker-witted than her husband, grabbed his arm and dragged him through the door into the laundry. I shrank behind the kitchen door as Mary turned, in answer to Katie's call, and in an imitation of Mrs. Ticer's voice so lifelike that I jumped, she called back: "Well! What's on your mind now?"

BOYS SATISFIED

"Don't forget to bring me some eggs in time for breakfast," Katie shrilled. "Me, I almost been eat out of mine keetchen mit dees crowd."

"I'm remember," Mary said, and turning, plodded on again, while Bill and Hank halted in their tracks.

"Aw! It's only the Ticers," Hank said disgustedly.

"We might as well get back to the car and hide in the rear seat again," Bill answered. "I guess that's our best bet, at that. It would be a fine thing if they came out another door and got away, while we were chasing the Ticers."

"Gee!" Bill answered; and upon the word the two boys dashed back to Noel's car and clambered into it, while I, secure from observation once more, went back to Katie's side and strained my eyes to watch the progress of Noel and Mary, in their grotesque disguise, toward the barn.

Katie was in the seventh heaven of delight at being able to be the goddess of the machine in the escape of the honeymooners. She was elaborating on her instructions, I was sure, when she followed up her request for eggs with an excited:

"Good night! Sleep tight!"

"Good night," Mary called back, but Noel remained silent. I guessed that he did not trust his voice to give an imitation of Mr. Ticer's voice, which should come anywhere near equaling Mary's performance.

"Don't call again," I told Katie in a low voice. "You've had wonderful success so far; but we ought not to delay them any longer."

I expected a bit of sulkiness upon the part of my little maid, for she dearly loves what she calls "dot movie stuff," but she proved unusually tractable.

NOISY MACHINE

"Dot's oke by me," she said largely, and I controlled my risibilities with difficulty.

"I think your eyes are better than mine, Katie," I told her quickly. "Will you tell me when they get into the car?"

"Vot foolishness you talk!" Katie countered. "Nobody in dees house got better lamps dan you. But me, I vatch, too. But nobody need eyes ven Jerry Ticer starts dot flivver. You kin hear heem go, out as far as Montauk Point."

"I wonder if it will bring the young people out here," I said worriedly.

"Sure ting!" Katie said with magnificent carelessness. "But vot goot vill eet do dem ven dey coom? Ve shoost lie like—vell, nefer mind. Und Meester Bill and Meester Hank, out dere in Meester Noel's old car, dey kin swear to eet."

"Yes, that's true, Katie, I assented. And then there came a blast from the horn of Jerry Ticer's car which should have awakened any sleepers within a radius of five miles.

CHAINED STAR PATTERN 592

Simple Scrap Quilt

Scrap quilts are fun to do; there is such variety in the work if the patches are all made of different scraps. This quaint pattern, Chained Star—the star is chained together with the scrap patches—is effective either if the same materials are repeated in each block, as shown, or if different ones are used throughout. There is good reason for this quilt being popular, for it is exceedingly easy to do.

Pattern 592 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Thanks so much for a new lingerie idea. This is a girdle of two-way stretch elastic that continues into a satin petticoat.

Go ashore wearing a smart costume consisting of a long coat and wrap-around skirt in beige and cream cotton tweed. The blouse is of brown linen with a monogram done in light brown wood.

Don't worry if your hands are cold at night. Muff bags for evening wear are a hold-over from winter to the spring season. A new model is a long oblong done in white and gold lame, fastened down the center front with a carved filigree gold ornament.

Gather up trains if you don't want to trip over them. A grand evening frock of steel gray satin has a long train which can be hooked up in back, or swirled around and attached to the waist in front when not in use. The train is ruffled and lined with green satin to match the very narrow shoulder straps.

Enchantment is in every fold of the lovely clothes prepared for southern wear. Consider the charm of a frock of white corduroy pique finished with a large, floppy bow, its shirtwaist front trimmed with tiny crystal and blue buttons exactly matching the color of the long, fitted blue velveteen coat that is worn over it.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Facts About X-Ray and Its Value

Modern medical science has successfully combatted many infections and disturbances of the human body. In former times many of them were considered incurable.

Dr. Copeland

Few people realize that our present knowledge of the cure of disease is due in a large measure to the persistent and untiring efforts of certain great men. Those men who have dedicated their lives to mankind and have striven to benefit the race.

Probably of all the discoveries credited to modern science, none has contributed more to the saving of human lives than the X-ray. This great instrument of human good was presented by Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen. He discovered the X-ray in 1895. Since then, millions of lives have been saved by the diagnostic use made of the X-ray.

Many of my readers will recall the crude early X-ray pictures reproduced in magazines and newspapers. In the beginning this method was used almost exclusively to photograph bones of humans and to locate foreign bodies like bullets.

The first X-ray machine was a crude one, difficult and dangerous to use. Today the X-ray has been so perfected that it takes accurate pictures of various parts and organs of the body. Its use helps the physician to study every part of the human anatomy. In consequence he discovers diseases that formerly baffled the medical profession.

The modern physician can actually visualize the internal organs. More than this, he can discover abnormalities before the old-time familiar symptoms appear.

Most persons have the mistaken idea that the X-ray is harmful and that the procedure of its use is a dangerous one. It is true, of course, that in the early days, it often proved harmful. In many instances, it led to severe and fatal X-ray burns. But this is not true today.

As I have said, the X-ray machine has been so perfected that all possible sources of danger have been eliminated. The X-ray examination causes no discomfort or pain.

The plate or X-ray picture is obtained by placing a sensitized film on one side or portion of the body to be examined. The X-ray current passes through the tissues to the film, leaving a picture of the imprint upon the plate.

This film is studied carefully and compared with a normal plate of the same part. Of course, the study of X-ray plates is a highly specialized one. It requires special training and instruction. The specialty is called "roentgenology" in honor of Dr. Roentgen, the father of the X-ray.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Melon Service

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Either is correct . . . It is just which you find more convenient. If a half of the cantaloupe is served, usually we find a spoon more convenient. If a slice of melon is served, any kind of melon, many people find the fork, or the knife and fork, more convenient. In Europe the small knife and fork, the fruit knife and fork, are always placed with a slice of melon, and many times this is the service that we find here.

Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a surprise birthday party for my sister. Will you please tell me just how to write these informal invitations so the invitations to the girls will let them know that they are to bring their escorts, and so the invitations to the boys will let them know that they are to each bring a girl friend? HILDA.

Your note might read something like this:

Dear Sarah:

I am planning to have a party for Betty, on her birthday, Friday, the tenth of April, and I do hope that you can come. And would like to bring a boy with you? If you will ask him first, and then tell me who is the fortunate boy that you have chosen, and his address, I'll write him, too, a note of invitation welcoming him to our home.

Will you plan to arrive about eight o'clock, and rather punctually, since it is a surprise party, and I'd naturally want to have the guests assemble before Betty comes in.

Do say "yes," for Betty and I wouldn't consider it a party without you! Affectionately

The note of invitation to a boy would be about the same, except that the sentence about bringing a guest would state "a girl." Then notice that I have suggested that you will write a note of invitation to the guests that are invited by guests whom you are inviting. This is the correct thing to do, and I hope that you will not omit these notes. They would be something like this:

Dear Mr. Thompson:

Jane Wellington has told me the happy news that she has invited you to come to our party for my sister Betty on Friday, the tenth of April, at eight o'clock, and I am writing to "second" her invitation, and to tell you how delighted we are that you are coming. It will be a pleasure for us to welcome you into our home, and we are looking forward to greeting you.

Cordially yours,

Remember when Col. Theodore Roosevelt was personally commanding his "Rough Riders" in the Spanish War? Here he's instructing an orderly. "T. R." in 1897 resigned as Assistant Secretary of Navy to recruit from his friends of the plains the "First Volunteer Cavalry." Later, of course, he became President.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Red Sox Corner Lefties.
Have Seven Southpaws.
Scarce On Other Clubs.

Two-Base King Passes.
Squash Racquets Popular.
Scales Beat Champions.

In days when left-hand pitchers are in great demand, and the rosters of some of the major league clubs are practically barren of capable portsiders, you may be surprised to learn that one outfit in the big show has as many as seven southpaws on its slab staff. That most unusual state of affairs exists in the hurling department of the Boston Red Sox. Not content with the acquisition of the leading fork-hander of the American League in Bob Grove, and the purchase of Rube Walberg as a reinforcement, the Red Sox management has continued its shopping operations in the southpaw market until now it owns five additional flingers of the same type.

Bob Grove

Bob Weiland was a holdover from last year. Fred Ostermueller was bought from Rochester. Herb Pennock was picked up as a free agent after being released by the Yankees. John Merena has just been obtained from Jersey City, and Lefty Hockette is a recruit from Reading.

Conditions on some of the other clubs are in sharp contrast. The A's do not have a solitary left-hander. Nor do the White Sox. The Cubs boast only Roy Joiner, a minor league recruit. The Dodgers, Reds and Browns also have only experimental material from the minors. These clubs could not find a seasoned left-hander, while the Red Sox came up with one at every grab. And Eddie Collins declares the southpaw monopoly was not premenditated. It just happened. Collins went out with the sole object of getting the best pitchers available, he says, and that there were more left-handers than right-handers in the group corralled was just one of baseball's unusual quirks of chance.

BASEBALL MAY PRODUCE THIRD GOVERNOR

Another state may choose its governor from the ranks of organized baseball. Tom Turner, president of the Portland club in the Pacific Coast League, this year will be a candidate for the office of chief executive of Oregon. If Turner should be elected, he would be the third baseball man to become governor of a state. John K. Tener, of Charleroi, first famous as a pitcher, was chief executive of Pennsylvania before serving as president of the National League, and the late Morgan G. Bulkeley, of Hartford, first president of the National League, had served a term in the gubernatorial chair of Connecticut.

As the operator of the Portland club, Turner has sent a number of prominent players to the major leagues, either men of his own finding or farm hands whom he developed for the A's. One of his products is Larry French, ace southpaw of the Pirates, and among the others are Mickey Cochrane, Chalmers Cissell, Rube Walberg, Sammy Hale, Lee Roy Mahaffey, Roger Cramer, Bob Johnson, Pinkey Higgins, Ed Coleman, Lou Finney and Bill Hunnefield.

WEBB LEAVES WITH RECORD FOR DOUBLES

Earl Webb, the veteran outfielder whom the White Sox have released to Milwaukee, in the American Association, leaves behind him as a reminder of his career in the major leagues an all-time record for two-base hits in a single season. While playing for the Red Sox in 1931, Webb established a new high for doubles in the big show by making 67 hits of that length in a total of 151 games. The previous record was 64, hung up by George Burns, of the Indians, in 1926. The National League top is 62, made by Paul Waner, of the Pirates, in 154 games in 1932.

Earl Webb

Webb did a lot of hopping around during his stay in fast company. First he played for the Giants and next with the Cubs in the National League, and after moving over to the American circuit he served with the Red Sox, Tigers and White Sox in the order named. Pittsburgh figured in Earl's career on two occasions. He made his first major league appearance at Forbes Field in 1925, when, fresh from Toledo, he came up as a pinch-hitter for the Giants. And when the Pirates traded Kiki Cuyler to the Cubs after the 1927 season, Donie Bush wanted Webb in addition to Sparky Adams in exchange, but had to take Pete Scott instead.

POPULARITY OF SQUASH RACQUETS GROWS

The increasing popularity of squash racquets has been strikingly in evidence in Pittsburgh and elsewhere this winter. The game has won many new players here, and holds such a strong appeal that once they start to play it they speedily become confirmed devotees. Of English origin, the sport of squash racquets has made amazing strides in this country since it was introduced in Philadelphia in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

One of the sport's strongest boosters is Capt. V. A. Cazalet, M. P., former amateur champion of England. He expounds the virtues of the game in explaining its increasing popularity, holding that it has great advantages over golf and tennis. Cazalet points out that it can be played at any time of the day or night, and at any season of the year. It is extremely cheap. It is possible within the minimum of time to get the maximum amount of exercise. It is great fun, even though you do not play it expertly. You need only one opponent, and you do not have to bother about the weather.

FIVE FEATHER CHAMPS OUTGROW CLASS

The featherweight fistic championship has become open again, in two ways this time to make it doubly certain. First Kid Chocolate resigned it in Havana a week ago because he found he could no longer make 126 pounds, and the New York Boxing Commission has since announced the decision to take the title away from the Cuban Negro because of his failure to accept within 30 days the officially recognized challenge of Frankie Klick.

Kid Chocolate

Chocolate is the fifth featherweight champion to eat himself out of the title. Terry McGovern did it in 1901. Young Corbett, who defeated him, was already above the limit, which was then 122 pounds, ringside. Johnny Dundee found himself beaten by the scales in 1925. Louis (Kid) Kaplan had to turn the crown back to the New York Commission in 1927 on account of increased poundage. Battling Battalino was the next to outgrow the division, and now Chocolate joins the list. Freddie Miller, who holds the N. B. A. title, also has announced that he probably will have to give it up because of increasing difficulty in making the weight. Of the numerous feathers who are expected to file claims to the title if no official tournament is held, Baby Arizmendi, a Mexican, is viewed as at least the greatest crowd pleaser, though so far he has declined all offers to box in the East, feeling that he can do better financially in California, where there are many Mexican fans.

GEORGE GIBSON, PIRATE MANAGER, SUPERVISING PACKING FOR TRAINING TRIP, BARS MEDICINE BALLS FROM EQUIPMENT

Because they have done more harm than good in past seasons, Manager George Gibson, of the Pirates, rules out medicine balls and stops Assistant Trainer Chauff Asten from packing 'em for the trip to the Paso Robles (Cal.) training camp, beginning Monday. Gibby says the players are prone to fool about too much, hit one another in the back and sides and in other ways cause injuries with the big spheres, and that they thus defeat their own purpose.

AMATEURS GET IMMUNITY GUARANTEE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The breach between the State Athletic Commission and the Amateur Athletic Union was widened today when Dr. W. D. McClelland, the local commissioner, declared the commission was ready to fight any interference by the amateur officials with amateur boxing shows or tournaments given permits by the commission, but lacking the saction of the A. A. U.

The Greater Pittsburgh championships are scheduled at the Boys' Club of Pittsburgh, in Lawrenceville, next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, and up to yesterday only two entries had been filed, according to the commissioner's advices. This was attributed by the sponsors of the tournament to the fear among boxers and coaches of reprisals from the A. A. U., if they compete while the commission refuses to recognize A. A. U. sanctions. Dr. McClelland said today:

"Make it as plain as you care to that the State Athletic Commission will not tolerate intimidation of or interference with any boxers or coaches who participate in shows for which it grants permits, satisfied that they are to be conducted on an amateur basis, and it guarantees to fully protect any boxers who enter under these conditions against suspension from the A. A. U.

"In fact, one of the conditions under which the A. A. U. will be able to regain the good graces of the commission when a meeting is held in Philadelphia to settle this matter will be that any suspensions which may be imposed on any innocent bystanders in this fight between the commission and the A. A. U., shall be immediately rescinded.

"In other words, I want amateur boxers to know that they have my guarantee and that of the State Athletic Commission of immunity from any punishment whatsoever by the A. A. U. for boxing in the Boys' Club or any other tournament approved by the commission. If fear of such a penalty has been holding them back from entering they may now come forward and feel free to compete without danger of becoming involved in the situation."

W. S. Haddock, president of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., asked the commission to hold the showdown meeting one week from today, but the commission has advised him this date is not agreeable and requested him to set another one.

Van Wie, Mrs. Hill In Golf Finale

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—A hard earned 2 and 1 victory over Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, Ia., sent Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, the national champion, into the finals of the South Atlantic women's golf championship tournament against Mrs. O. H. Hill, of Kansas City.

It took Mrs. Hill 18 holes to get a stroke advantage over Marian Miley, of Lexington, Ky., whose play in Florida this winter has ranked her among the leading women golfers of the nation.

Dr. McLaren Seeks Bucknell Grid Post

Dr. George McLaren, former Pitt fullback star, has tossed his hat into the ring along with those seeking the head football coaching job at Bucknell University. The post recently was vacated by Carl Snavely, who left to take over the grid reigns at North Carolina State.

McLaren said last night that he had been in communication with the Bucknell authorities. Dr. B. W. Griffith, in a statement from Lewisburg, said that a successor to Snavely likely would be named next Monday or Tuesday.

The varsity basketball arrays of Pitt and Carnegie Tech trespass on Eastern floors tonight. The Panthers, minus Claire Cribbs, brilliant center, and Charley Hughes, steady performing guard, take on formidable Georgetown in an Eastern Intercollegiate Conference game at Washington, D. C.

Cribbs was sent to Mercy Hospital yesterday to undergo treatment for a bruised leg, injured in the game with Westminster Wednesday night. Hughes has been confined to the hospital since the return of the Panthers from South Bend last Sunday. He has been suffering with an attack of the flu.

TWO STARS OUT

The Panthers were forced to depart for Washington last night with full realization that they would have to battle the tough Hoyas tonight with an eager but inexperienced center in action. Young Pete Noon is improving daily and has shown great promice, but he's no Cribbs by from here to Hong Kong. He may come through tonight, arriving at the peak that his coach, Dr. Carlson, expects him ultimately to attain. If he does, all will be well. If not, the going will be very, very rocky for the Pitts.

Georgetown nosed out the Panthers by a single point margin a year ago in Washington and last year's Pitt team that battled the Hilltoppers wasn't a mite stronger than the crippled array that will go to bat tonight.

Tech, victor over Bucknell in Lewisburg Thursday night, hopes to rise to the heights and upset Temple this evening. The task will be a tough one. The Tartans are not as strong as they were when they met the Owls here earlier in the season, and they couldn't beat the in-and-out Usiltonmen then.

OLYMPIC STAR HERE

An Olympic team member will be seen in action here tonight in the Keystone Club pool as Pitt and Franklin and Marshall match aquatic strength in an Eastern Swimming Association meet. The Olympian is Charley Chambers, star backstroker, who will have to beat Pitt's ace, Russ Lindberg, to carry off first honors in the 150-yard event. A new national intercollegiate record is expected to be established as the two stars clash.

The Panthers have not suffered a defeat since entering the association, but they face their toughest test in the F. and M splashers tonight. A victory for Pitt will assure the locals of at least a tie for the E. A. S. title, which crown they shared last year with Rutgers.

While all this is going on, the Panther track and field squad will be showing its wares in Morgantown against West Virginia's varsity performers in a dual meet. For once, the powerful Pitt squad, well drilled and expertly handled by Coach Carl (I'm No Swede) Olsen, is favored to win.

By way of warming up for the meet with Pitt tonight, the F. and M. swimmers defeated Carnegie Tech's varsity yesterday, 39 to 32.

CHALMERS VICTOR

Chalmers captured his specialty, the 150-yard backstroke, in 1:45.6, beating Boyer, Tartan star, and Bontelle, another Plaid swimmer, to the finish. He also swam on the F. and M. relay team, which beat the Plaid quartet in the 400-yard event in 4:13.

In a meet held in conjunction with the varsity affair, the Langley High School team defeated the Tech Plebes, 42 to 24. The varsity summary:

50-yard free style—Won by Berdeyn, Tech; Green, F. & M., second; Levine, F. & M., third. Time, 26 4-10 seconds.

220-yard free style—Won by G. Chalmers, F. & M.; Holiday, Tech, second; D. Chalmers, F. & M., third. Time, 2:29 8-10.

GENEVA BEATEN

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Feb. 24.—Geneva College's hopes of eventually emerging with the Tri-State Conference basketball title rudely were upset here last night as the Covenanters were taken for a basketball ride by Waynesburg's varsity tossers. The Jackets won, 48 to 42, in a thrilling struggle.

Geneva trailed by 30 to 15 at half time and thereafter never were able to catch the Jackets. Janosik, Waynesburg forward, was high scorer of the game with 16 points.

Between halves, Janosik and Rab Currie were presented wrist watches by a delegation of home town folks from Monessen. The lineup:

South High School's crack band of basketballers are "in" as far as the Section I title in the City Scholastic League is concerned, but the race for Section II honors remains unsettled, with Perry still half a game ahead of South Hills, but not yet definitely assured of entering the championship playoff series.

South sewed up the Section I gonfalon yesterday and annexed its eleventh victory in as many starts for the season by knocking off Westinghouse, 33 to 27, yesterday. Westinghouse made more of a fight out of it than generally was expected, but failed to stop Milkovich and Spotovich, the former scoring 14 points and the latter 10. Ramey, Westinghouse guard, picked up nine points for his team.

PERRY WINS AGAIN

In Section II, Perry defeated Carrick in a tough struggle, 34 to 26, to remain out in front, while South Hills stayed in the running by knocking off the slumping Langley quintet, 30 to 24. It was Kornick again who led Perry to its triumph, the brilliant North Side forward scoring 14 points. His effort was matched by Keene, the Perry center.

For South Hills, Neeb, center, showed the way with 12 points, Carr getting 10 for Langley.

In other City League frays, Connelley walloped Allderdice, 44 to 27; Fifth Avenue beat Peabody, 43 to 28, and Allegheny downed Vocational, 37 to 23.

MILERS STAGE FINAL DUEL

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Glenn Cunningham, Gene Venzke and Bill Bonthron have their last chance to see which is the best man tonight in the Olympic mile of the national indoor track and field championships in Madison Square Garden.

Their paths will not cross again in competition if Bonthron holds to his intention of competing only in dual track meets and the intercollegiates, to which Cunningham is not eligible as a Kansas student.

Princeton Bill won the first test last Saturday in the Baxter mile of the N. Y. A. C. games in the Garden, noosing out Cunningham with Venzke a step behind.

His margin of victory was so close, however, that there still remains a question of superiority among the three and especially at 1,500 meters, the distance of the championship, or 120 yards short of the mile.

SWIFT ADAMANT AS HOLDOUT

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Bill Swift, Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, says he positively will not sign at the salary he is being offered.

Swift refused to discuss the terms of the contract offered him by William E. Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh club. Neither would he give any inkling as to the amount of salary he is demanding. He said:

"I will say that the first contract they offered me called for a nice slice in salary. Naturally, I sent it back. The next one was for the same salary I received in 1933, but I think I am entitled to an increase on the strength of winning 14 games, and will not sign until they raise the ante."

Girl Tennis Stars Clash for Title

NEW YORK, Feb 24.—(AP.)—Norma Taubele, of New York, the second-seeded favorite, and Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., 17-year-old unheralded player, will meet for the twenty-seventh annual women's national indoor singles tennis championship this afternoon on the courts of the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Miss Taubele entered the finals yesterday when she conquered the lone Pacific Coast entry, Jane Sharp, of Pasadena, in a stubbornly-fought semi-final 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Miss Pederson turned the tables on Millicent Hirsh, of New York, the national indoor girls' champion, in three sets, 10-8, 1-6, 6-3.

Layton Takes Title From Cochran

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Johnny Layton, Sedalia, Mo., veteran, has stroked his way to the top of the billiard rankings. With a methodical display of shotmaking and brilliant defensive playing he defeated the defending champion, Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, last night, 50 to 23, to win the world three-cushion crown for the eleventh time in more than 30 years of competition.

SQUASH TITLE PLAY OPENS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Sixty-one contestants, by far the largest field ever assembled for a local squash racquet event, will square off in the annual City Class B title tourney beginning at the Keystone Athletic Club this afternoon. Competition in the upper half of the draw is listed for today, with each of the three new wooden-floor courts slated to be occupied by scheduled tussles from 12:30 o'clock until after 4.

Jousting in the lower sector is slated for tomorrow. Later round frays will be pushed along until Saturday, March 10, when the finale will be staged in conjunction with the second day's action of the Jack Summers-Ben Pope professional exhibition series announced for that week-end.

All clubs allied with the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association are amply represented in the Class B affair. The Keystone leads with upwards of a score of aspirants, with the P. A. A. and the Pittsburgh Golf Club not far behind and the Edgeworth Club and Allegheny Country Club likewise entering several delegates apiece.

No official seeded list has been compiled for the secondary classic, but the following octet of P. S. R. A. Inter-Club League players may be found informally interspersed at strategic points throughout the bracket so that the quarter-finals are certain to feature only experienced combatants or those who have come through stiff opposition in the early stanzas of hostilities: Chip Kennedy, Theos Manos, J. D. McCutcheon, and Jean Caspar, of the K. A. C., and Dr. Whitey Stegeman, Dr. John O'Loughlin, Karl Woolfe and the writer of the P. A. A.

The foregoing group, however, by no means exhausts the array of formidable contenders. Stan Quay and Bill Gordon, of Allegheny, and Graham McCargo, of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, are distinct threats, as is McCargo's teammate, George Lockhart. Del Kennedy, Ham Robinson, Bob Lampus, Jim Fulton, and Adolph Schmidt are menacing Keystoners, while Rod Flannery, George Henderson, Bill Clegg, Ed Kelly and Jim McKay loom as P. A. A. possibilities.

Twelve leading Steel City aces have been officially placed on the class A roster by the P. S. R. A. executive committee and are ineligible for the class B conclave.

The class B pairings follow:

TODAY

12:30 p. m.—G. C. Kennedy vs. F. S. Hastings; W. A. Gordon vs. C. K. Hubbard; F. R. Stoner vs. J. K. Foster.

1:15 p. m.—W. P. Berg vs. W. C. Robinson, Jr.; Robert McClintic vs. Ralph Carson; W. B. McFall vs. G. D. Henderson.

2 p. m.—George Lockhart vs. T. N. Griggs; J. G. Fulton, Jr., vs. Karl G. Woolfe; J. D. McCutcheon vs. George E. [illegible].

2:45 p. m.—D. J. Schneider vs. J. Roberts Turner; H. A. Robinson vs. bye; Ned [illegible] vs. Stan Quay.

3:30 p. m.—Robert T. Lampus vs. Henry [illegible]; T. F. McConnaughey vs. Edward F. Rose; Owen Guel vs. J. F. McKay, T. [illegible] vs. Paul Sullivan.

Local Boys Make Hearst Rifle Team

They are Gilbert Wooward, of 2421 Perrysville avenue, and Eric Fisher Wood, of the Coronado Apartments.

In selecting these boys for the team, Sergt. Raymond Strohm, regular Army coach, declared that this year's V. F. M. A. squad should be much stronger than the one which finished third in the Hearst competition last season.

LOCAL LACROSSE TEAM DOWNS DETROIT

The Yellow Jackets, Pittsburgh's representatives in the American and International Lacrosse Association, were in a position to which they have become well accustomed, the top of the Association heap, today as they left for Chicago and their battle with Kelly DeGray's White Sox there tomorrow night.

The locals, winners of the first half title, last night gained undisputed possession of first place in the second half race by defeating the Detroit Tigers, making their debut in association competition, 22 to 8, in a stirring game at Motor Square Garden.

LOCALS WIN SECOND

Detroit, admitted to the loop when it was reorganized for the second half campaign, threw a brand new assortment of players against the Jackets, but the Sutherlandmen found them very similar to previous opponents in that they can be taken, after a struggle. The victory was the second in as many starts for the locals in second-half skirmishing.

After two periods of strenuous battling, the Pittsburghers put on full steam and forged ahead late in the third stanza and maintained their lead until the finish. The Jackets scored 11 goals in the final period while holding the opposition to two. McLean scored five teams in the concluding period.

Albert Vincent, brilliant Jacket forward, led the scorers with six goals. Tricky Bouliane was the only performer other than McLean to score five points. D. Thomas, of the Detroit crew, garnered four goals, half as many as the entire team was able to register.

VINCENT OPENS SCORING

Vincent opened the scoring in the initial stanza for the Jackets when he dented the net on two occasions, but D. Thomas, Lounsbury and Shannon scored in succession to put the visitors out in front. In the next period Vincent again tallied twice to give the Jackets the lead Early in the third period Thomas scored twice to give his team the lead, but shortly afterwards the home team took the lead and was never headed.

Ty Silk injured his right foot in the second stanza and had to be helped off the floor. After having his foot taped he returned to the game. The lineup:

Pittsburgh	Pos.	Detroit.
Cordick	G	Hall
N. Langevin	D	Stevens
P. Langevin	D	Griffiths
McLean	C	Shannon
Core	F	Thomas
Vincent	F	Lounsbury

Score by periods:

Pittsburgh	2	3	6	11—22
Detroit	3	1	2	2— 8

Scoring—Pittsburgh: Vincent 6, Bouliane 5, McLean 5, Core 3, P. Langevin 2, Jennings 1. Detroit: Thomas 4, Lounsbury 2, Shannon 1, Cleghorne 1.

Referee—E. England, Toronto.

The American school for the deaf of Hartford, Conn., defeated the Virginia school, 22-18 and the New York State School by the same score.

POINTING CHIN TO RIGHT LESSENS DESIRE TO KILL BALL

ANOTHER REASON FOR KEEPING CHIN BACK

From the time the first golf layout was invented golfers have been consciously trying to guide their swings. They attempt to apply all the platitudes that a long list of golfers have amassed and passed on for posterity. Yet, in spite of these many secrets, a new theory is brought to the fore occasionally that also warrants a tryout. For instance, the suggestion that the conscious mind should be left out of the golf swing might help some golfers.

This is in direct contradiction to the idea countless golfers hold, yet when one considers that golfers are less conscious of the mechanics of the swing during a fine round there seems to be something to the theory worth thinking about. The suggestion here is to make the mind a blank and hit the ball without consciously guiding the swing. To facilitate this process it is well to keep the chin back, thus allowing the eyes to look at the ball from an acute angle in the manner of Fred Morrison above.

This is conducive to a smoother, more rhythmic, stroke, for there is not the conscious desire to swing viciously at the ball under these circumstances that there is when the eyes are focussed directly and intently at the sphere.

'TUCKY DERBY DRAWS FIELD OF 124

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—America's leading 3-year-olds were nominated for the sixtieth Kentucky Derby, it was announced today by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf Association and executive director of Churchill Downs. One hundred and twenty-four were named, six more than last year. This $30,000 added event at one mile and a quarter will take place at Churchill Downs on Saturday, May 5.

The Greentree Stable, of Mrs. Payne Whitney, led the nominators in the number entered with five. Mrs. Whitney won the 1931 Kentucky Derby with Twenty Grand, and his mile and a quarter in 2:01 4-5 is the record for the race. E. R. Bradley, who won last year with Brokers Tip, the year before with Burgoo King, in 1926 with Bubbling Over and in 1921 with Behave Yourself, named four for this year's contest.

MANY FILLIES IN FIELD

C. V. Whitney nominated four. This establishment, racing in the name of Mr. Whitney's father, the late Harry Payne Whitney, won the Kentucky Derby in 1915 with Regret and in 1927 with Whiskery. William Woodward's Belair Stud, winner of the 1930 Kentucky Derby with Gallant Fox, entered four, as did john Marsch and Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable.

Three representatives were named by Willis Sharpe Kilmer, whose Exterminator triumphed in the 1918 Derby; Mrs. John Hay Whitney, George D. Widener, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, H. C. Phipps, Warren Wright's Calumet Farm and W. Graham.

An unusual feature of the 1934 Kentucky Derby nominations is the number of high-class fillies among the eligibles. These include the winter favorite, Charles T. Fisher's Mata Hari, E. R. Bradley's Bazaar, M. L. Schwartz's Hindu Queen, the Kershaw Stable's On Hand, C. V. Whitney's Jabot and Mrs. John Zoeller's Tatanne. The entries:

SHEA TO WORK TITLE BOUT

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—(Ins.)—Leo Shea, of New York, has been selected to referee next Wednesday night's world heavyweight championship contest here between Primo Carnera and Tommy Loughran, by the Miami Boxing Commission after the managers of the gladiators refused to pick one from three names submitted.

In other words, Bill Duffy, representing Carnera, and Joe Smith, the challenger's manager, threw the matter right into the hands of the eight commissioners.

SHEA SELECTED

The board went into secret session yesterday and emerged 10 minutes later with the announcement that Shea was to referee the big fight.

Shea has been a licensed referee in Miami four years. He is also licensed in California and Missouri.

On Monday, at 2 o'clock, the commission will discuss the selection of the two judges who will render the decision in conjunction with the referee. The managers received the names of eight or nine tentative officials. The judges will not be selected until the headliners climb through the ropes.

TOM IMPRESSES GENE

The fight camp excitement of the day shifted to West Palm Beach where Loughran, who has been showing brilliantly in training against his lofty sparring partners, Jack Pettifer, Ace Clark, and Ed Hogan, entertained the former heavyweight king, Gene Tunney.

Tunney refused to pick a winner, but his sympathies appeared entirely with the man who stands out among heavyweights today as the boxing counterpart of the former marine. They once boxed an eight-round no-decison bout in 1922. Tunney said:

"If I didn't think Tommy had a chance, I wouldn't go to the fight, and I'll be there at the ring side."

Loughran stepped on the scales after the workout and weighed in at 186 pounds, his best fighting weight. He will come to Miami tomorow for his final heavy workout in the Garden Stadium.

Parks Shoots 72 In Tampa Tourney

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 24.—A trio of porfessional stars, Willie McFarlane, Paul Runyan and Joe Turnesa, were out in front as a field of star golfers set forth for the second 18 holes of play in the 72-hole Gasparilla open tourney today.

The star trio yesterday turned in scores of 66, four under par, as nine professionals bettered the course's par 70.

Sam Parks, Jr., of the South Hills Country Club, of Pittsburgh, shot a fine 72 to stay close on the heels of the leaders. He was out in 38 and back home in 34.

Nelson, Endzevick In Handball Final

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. — (AP.)—George Nelson, of Washington, former A. A. U. and Y. M. C. A. singles champion, eliminated Sam Atcheson, of Memphis, defending titleholder, in a semi-final match of the national Y. M. C. A. handball championships last night. The score was 21-11, 21-7.

In the other semi-final match, John Endzevick, of Cleveland, defeated Albert Hobelmann, of Baltimore, also a former A. A. U. and Y. M. C. A. champion, 14-21, 21-9, 21-9.

Steubenville Girl In Miami Final

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24.—(AP.)—Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, O., continued her long driving and excellent playing to defeat Mrs. Joyce Bushel, of Salisbury, N. J., 2 up in the semi-finals of the Flagler women's golf tournament.

She will play Mrs. Joe Bydolek, of Buffalo, N. Y., the medalist, today in the 18-hole finals. Mrs. Bydolek eliminated Mrs. Marion Hochheimer, of New York, in an easy 6 and 5 victory.

POPE TO MEET JACK SUMMERS

Jack Summers, thrice national professional squash racquets champion, will meet Ben Pope, famous Keystone Athletic Club "pro," in a three-day series of 25 games on the Keystone gallery court here March 9, 10, and 11, according to announcement of K. A. C. Squash Committee Chairman Charles A. Fagan, Jr., yesterday. The competition will be split into six sessions with the verdict depending on victory in a majority of the quarter-century bracket of games.

Summers defeated Pope in the national final at Boston in 1931. He retained the title through 1932, relinquished it to Johnny Skillman of the Apawamis Club in 1933, and regained it at Philadelphia last month when Skillman defaulted in the latter stages of the windup due to a foot injury. The premier is 41 years old, but carries his age lightly. He is an exponent of the all-court, all-stroke game and seeks to instill this, as well as a measure of his splendid fighting spirit, into youthful racqueters of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is coach.

CENTRAL LOOP TEAMS PLAY

With the Central District Soccer League title already won by the Old Carnegie aggregation, little interest will attend the playing of the two scheduled games this afternoon. The champions go to Swissvale for their final game, meeting Union Switch at the Church street field. The other game finds Beltzhoover making the trip to Ambridge to meet the Bridge Worwers.

Tomorrow, the outstanding game of the day finds Avella clashing with Heidelberg at Greenlee Field, the winner scheduled to meet the Cleveland Indians here one week from tomorrow. The winner of this game represents the West against the East in final of the national amateur cup competition.

Duquesne	0	2	1	5	12	.000

By CARL W. SHATTO

The local hockey spotlight, which for the last several days has been focused on the Pittsburgh-Buffalo game to be staged here Monday night, temporarily will be shifted back on City Hockey League activities tonight when the J. Scott Morgans meet the H. J. Webers at Duquesne Garden.

The game will be the first staged here in more than a week in which neither Duquesne nor Carnegie Tech is involved, and it should be one of the best battles of the league season. On the occasion of their last meeting, on January 27, the Webers defeated the Morgans, 4-6, to hand the league leaders their only setback of the season. The Morgans, who downed the Webers, 4-0, in the season inaugural, are eager to take the edge in their season series for, in so doing, they can ease the sting of the unexpected defeat they sustained at the hands of the Oaklanders.

ALL-STARS' LINEUP SET

The lineup which the league All-Stars will throw against the Nichols Alumni Hockey Association, of Buffalo, in their game here Monday was altered today when Bill Lockhart was forced to withdraw because of a heavy cold, and Johnny Gibson was forced out with a severe knee injury. These misfortunes leave the Red Ravens without representation, as Regis Daviese, of the Pirates, and Bob Schooley, of the Morgans, have been named as substitutes for the incapacitated players.

Terry McGovern, coach of the All-Stars, today selected his starting lineup for the "big game." It will be Frank Curl in goal, Joe McCutcheon and John McSorley at defense, Dick Scully at center and Frank Tyson and Roy Schooley at the wings.

NICHOLS TEAM STRONG

The Nichols squad, made up of former college stars from Yale, Princeton, Amherst, Dartmouth, Cornell, the University of Toronto and Nichols School, has been scored upon only three times in winning 10, tying one and losing no games this season.

The Pirates' game with Carnegie Tech, scheduled Monday, has been postponed and will be played as part of a double-header on Wednesday. The probable lineup for tonight's game:

Webers.		Morgans.
Curl	G	Scully
Cohen	D	McSorley
Campbell	D	Tyson
Briggs	C	R. Schooley
Adams	W	Powell
D. Battle	W	B. Schooley

Weber spares—Kelly, McNeil, Cooper, J. Battle, Schumm. Morgan spares—Battaglio, Dort, Lovett, Coulter, Jeffries.

Mercersburg Wins School Track Title

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP.)—The strong Mercersburg Academy track team from Pennsylvania, scoring 24 points in six of the 13 events, won the first Eastern interscholastic indoor track and field meet at Madison Square Garden last night.

The Pennsylvania boys were the class of a field of about 1,000 athletes, mostly from New York high schools. Led by Jack White, stocky football star and sprinter, they won two events, placed second in two more and collected odd points on a third, a fourth and a fifth.

OLD RIVALS CLASH

The St. Joseph Lyceum basketeers will attempt to hang up their thirty-third win of the season at the expense of McCann's South Siders, tonight on the Mt. Oliver floor, Ormsby avenue. In a preliminary the St. Joseph Ponies will stack up against the Beacon Club.

Portrait of a Columnist Thinking Out Loud

Ho, hummmm . . . Slept at least eight hours—for a change—but sooooh tired . . . That's the last time I'll try any exercising, too . . . Ohhhh, my back! . . . And my legs . . . And my ribs and my sides . . . Such a sappy thing to do—exercise . . . But it dawned on me that I'm usually sitting on something . . . A chair at work—or at home . . . In a cab, a night club or on an actor . . . Always plopping into a seat . . . No wonder, I said to me, that I'm always yawning—I need fresh air—and some exercise . . . And so what?

And so I put my paws on my hips (whoops!) and I tried that standing-sitting-standing exercise five times and almost died . . . Then I tried to remember the old routine at school—outstretched arms—back and forth—and forth and back and so on—and how my bones crackled. . . . Then I said the devil with it, but that was yesterday when I went to beddie-by-by . . . But today! . . . Owww-ch! . . . Oooh! . . . Mah-mah!! . . . And my hair is thinning . . . And my frontage makes me ashamed of myself . . . "You look all right!" counsels my severest critic; "when you're thinner your face looks drawn. Why should you look pretty?" . . . But that isn't it, at all . . . My suits are choking me—the buttons don't button comfortably . . . I eat too much and I haven't the aggravations of the old days . . . And I'm going to be 37 in April! . . . Oh, I know I shouldn't complain about anything—I'm working and I'm getting the best of it—and so many people aren't, etc. . . . Nevertheless I'm losing my sex-appeal . . . Retribution?

A good song title rates a line from me any time . . . Billy Rose's latest is: "Beautiful Face—Have a Heart!" . . . They were babbling last night . . . About the grand performance of Elisabeth Bergner in "Catherine the Great" . . . "She's a lot like Helen Hayes," said an admirer . . . "Well," retorted another, "is that bad?" . . . Of all things! I think it happened up in Toronto, Ont. . . . At any rate, the chief there decided to stop all gambling . . . The first raid was on the press room at City Hall—where the reporters were playing penny-ante! . . . What a diplomat that copper ain't.

Well, the longer you live, the more you're amazed at this and that . . . Now what do you think? . . . I learn that such slang terms as the following were written over 300 years ago, to wit: "A hell of a time"—"Dead as a doornail"—"Done me wrong"—"Beat it!"—"She falls for it"—"Not so hot"—"Go hang yourself!" — "I hope to frame thee"—and "How you do talk!" . . . The author being Willie Shakespeare! . . .

Funny crack about two plump guys by Lew Brown, who is no billiard cue himself . . . Brown says that with Mack Gordon and Al Dubin, the songwriters, it is a case of the survival of the fattest . . . And the talk that Will Rogers is writing the Fox Follies is inaccurate . . . Right now I have a headache big enough for a movie star . . . Eli Lloyd Hoffman's definition of Broadway rates high on the list. He says that in order to retain your popularity on the Big Alley you have to keep on your toes and off the other fellow's . . . Ohhhh—I don't know! . . . . If they round up all the girls on Broadway, who do not pet—and they put them all in one room—you can safely wager on it that they wouldn't know what to do with her.

Fan Dancing Faith Bacon In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

There is a rather interesting little movie in the Penn this week called "All of Me." Miriam Hopkins and Frederic March, as a very aristocratic New England couple, learn about love, during the course of the film, from George Raft and Helen Mack, who repose at the other end of the social ladder.

The first-named pair are suave and charming, and the others intense and tragic. Raft breaks jail and rescues Miss Mack from a reformatory, all with the aid of Miss Hopkins. When it transpires that a guard has been murdered in the excitement, the unfortunate lovers plunge to their deaths as Miss Hopkins looks on.

Immensely sobered by her dip into real life, the heroine makes up a quarrel she has had with Mr. March, and the picture leaves them on their way west to help build Boulder Dam or something like that.

"All of Me" has its dramatic moments as well as a few dull ones. But it all doesn't matter very much, for what is drawing the crowds to the Penn is the stage show, known as a "Century of Progress" Revue.

As star we have Miss Faith Bacon, who did a fan dance in an Earl Carroll show some years ago, and revived her number at the World's Fair after Sally Rand had made all the front pages. There are also three or four freaks, some acrobats, a dancing team, and a chorus duplicating acts from the "Streets of Paris" and "Old Mexico" concessions at the fair, with a barker and a rube comedian for atmosphere.

Miss Bacon, who was probably responsible for the large number of men in yesterday's audiences, did her fan dance and a glorified rumba, and appeared as one of those "living pictures" for a few seconds at the close of the show. She is pretty and graceful, and wears as few clothes as the girls in the Variety around the corner. A lot of the gentlemen patrons seemed to be staying to see her twice.

Oriental Act Pitt Best

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

The girlies are at it again in the Pitt, with a show that is frankly monotonous in its capitalized play upon sex, introduced under the obvious title of "Broadway Peek-a-Boo." You've seen it all before, you'll probably see it again, but that doesn't erase the fact that these wide-open exhibits, week after week, pall to the point of boredom.

Luckily, as a relief from the fair ladies, Long Tack Sam, with a troupe of agile Orientals, is part of the show. He performs feats of magic; his men do an excellent swirling paper dance and twist through acrobatic stunts that are at the same time artistic and unusual. Also belonging to the male part of the show are blackface Al and Ted Waldman, who genuinely amuse at times, then again depend on off-color stories for their laughs.

On the dance bill there's nudity in silver in the person of Inez Gamble and the Dance of the Seven Veils that can do without comment. One lovely dance, though, is a waltz toe number, differing markedly from Manya and Martin's modern hot-cha team offerings.

Screenland's version of fraternity life in college is the theme of the moving picture "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," which gives Buster Crabbe a chance to win the school's popular girl, Mary Carlisle, while the engaging Charles Starrett plays the all-for-my-alma-mater hero. Graham McNamee's news flashes and a mountain color short musically presented by the "Rolling Stones" winds up the offering.

Davis, Regent Show Two

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Comedy and near-tragedy mingle in the double feature program in the Davis and Regent. W. C. Fields, Alison Skipworth and Baby LeRoy share honors in "Tillie and Gus," nonsensical comedy adapted from a Rupert Hughes story, in which a ferry-boat race with Fields as skipper and fire-crackers for stoking fuel, and a paint-mixing scene according to radio directions, form the high spots of humor.

In "Bedside," the other feature picture, Warren William, with the aid of a bogus medical school diploma; a trusting nurse, Jean Muir, and a press agent, Allen Jenkins, climbs to the top of the medical profession before his sins find him out and he lands with a bang, almost at prison's doorstep. His charlatanism results in the death of a famous singer, who is miraculously brought back to life by a "real" doctor assistant. He tells all when an operation, which he cannot perform, is imperative to save the life of the no-longer trusting nurse. Through her intercession, he is saved from imprisonment and the "bedside" fadeout bodes fair for a happy ending.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By GWYNN

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 24.—With Moss Hart back in town to write his own assignment for himself on a play, the reception accorded him was quite different from his first arrival in Hollywood. At that time the studio sent a car and liveried chauffeur to meet him at the train. He was immediately whisked over to the studio, where he was rushed madly past 80 or 90 people and directly into the sanctum sanctorum of the Irving Thalberg office. No sooner were the formal greetings over than Thalberg told Hart that a story he wanted him to get to work on immediately, that it was a rush job and he'd like it completed in two weeks. So Moss Hart took the script and hied him home and after about 10 days' hard work he re-appeared in Thalberg's office flushed with victory and handed him the completed script. Whereupon Thalberg looked up and said, "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I gave you the WRONG story."

The thing that's striking everyone in Hollywood as being very funny is that, no matter where you turn at the moment, huge billboard signs shriek at you with the announcement, "GIRLS: EARL CARROLL IS IN TOWN!" And in small print something to the effect that the girls ought to come up and see him some time because he's looking for chorus lassies. Of course, the first laugh is the build-up to come and see Carroll and the second one is that his picture has been in production for weeks and he brought his entire chorus of 12 girls along with him from New York.

We never would have believed it, because, so far as we can see, the United States is simply overrun with them, but Fox has found it necessary to import a child-actor. No fooling. They've signed up a 12-year-old youngster by the name of Charles Bastin, who is French and who, it seems, has warmed the hearts of European audiences. Bastin has already made three American shorts.

* * *

"Soviet," another of those pictures that has had more on again, off again moments, is again slated for production and will form part of Irving Thalberg's current program for MGM. It looks as though this might go through now because Diana Wynyard, who just had her option lifted by MGM, has been assigned the lead in "Soviet," and it will be her first picture on her return from the Radio lot.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.

Will Rogers

Flew up from Washington last night. Senate or the House, neither one was operating yesterday. Shows you what giving 'em a raise does. But they was awful busy investigating. I run into my old friends Pat Harrison and Bob La Follette and they was investigating sugar. We have more arguments over sugar than we do over all the things combined that sugar goes on, or in. Pat was kinder protecting Mississippi. They got a kind of kaffir corn that renders out a thing they think is sorter sweet. In another room they was investigating Wall Street. That was a real sugar investigation. Corporations loaned 20 billions to Wall Street in '29. So Mr. Roosevelt didn't invent the word billion.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

TWO ARRESTED IN CAFE LOOTING

Two men, described by city detectives as ex-convicts, were held in Central Police Station today on larceny charges after they were said to have admitted lotting a North Side restaurant of $500 worth of whisky, cigarets and cigars.

They gave their names as Adam L. Phillips, 28, and Edward A. Golemski, 31, alias Gibson. They were arrested in a Union avenue rooming house by Detectives Edward McEntee and Clarence Raeder after the detectives reported finding a jimmy and a small saw hidden in their bed.

The pair, said to have served terms in the penitentiary and workhouse for similar offenses, admitted breaking into the restaurant of Robert White, at 20 East Park way, February 4, and stealing washing machines from freight cars on the North Side, according to McEntee and Raeder.

Bernie Heads Program in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Greeting "all youse guys and youse gals" with his pleasant flippancy Ben Bernie introduces his orchestra in the Stanley as the stage feature of a bill that includes "Search for Beauty," the screen attraction. Combined they make a standout comedy bill, for there is plenty of humor in the Berniesque sallies that interlard the songs and instrumental pieces by the group he heads, and there is a lot of hilarity in "Search for Beauty."

The picture features James Gleason, Robert Armstrong, Ida Lupino, Buster Crabbe and Gertrude Michael, and it momentarily presents some 30 winners of a search for beauty contest, over which so much ballyhoo was made at the time it was conducted, the winners of which included a Pittsburgh boy, William Odell.

The basis of it is the making a racket of physical culture by a couple of as funny racketeers as you may hope to see in James Gleason, dumbly bright and tight-fisted, and Robert Armstrong, the big-idea man, who induces Jimmy to invest his coin for the revival of a physical culture magazine, the owner of which has died. To give it class they engage Miss Lupino and Mr. Crabbe, Olympic champions, as co-editors, who give them a headache by insisting on keeping things on the up and up. Ye eds. are staked to a farm to get rid of them, and they turn it into a health resort. Still, the chiselers are not finished, and their attempt to muscle in on the new resort makes plenty of fun.

This may be your first view of Miss Lupino, blonde English actress, and you will like her. Crabbe shows improvement as an actor. Gleason and Armstrong are constant laughs.

Bernie and all the lads, including Frank Prince, Billy Wilgas, Manny Prager and Dick Stablie, win a lot of applause for their genuinely entertaining efforts, which would be improved if Mr. Winchell's pet aversion did not mention the right name of the bad place so often. Local radio artists appear briefly.

A Joe Penner short comedy and news reel complete a good bill.

Local Radio Acts In Sunday Show

The Sunday midnight show in the Stanley will feature the various radio acts who are competing for the appearance Tuesday night on Ben Bernie's NBC show. Expected to appear are Paul Gannon, the Weston Sisters, Three Happy Chaps, Ambrose of the Blues Chasers, Betty Cruikshank, Jimmy Di Palma, Howard Price, The So-and-Sos Trio and Ted Yearsley.

Players Not Dismayed By Lent

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Despite the Lenten season, there is feverish activity among the Little Theater groups, though they do not recommend their performances as appropriate penance. It looks like a duplication of efforts between Islam Grotto on the North Side and the Dracomtra Players on the South Hills. In the Grotto on East Montgomery avenue, Monday evening, they are presenting "The Bad Man," while in the Washington school, Mt. Lebanon, next Thursday and Friday, "The Devil" is on the boards. Maybe they are not the same person!

The Grotto has given some good performances of "The Devil Passes" and other difficult dramas in its $400,000 home. Dracomtra, under Dr. Ward Ewalt, has been one of the most ambitious of local organizations, as their choice of a Molnar comedy indicates.

"The Devil" was once played by four companies simultaneously in New York, two of the stars being George Arliss and Edwin Stevens. In the South Hills revival the role of Dr. Miller (the Devil) will be taken by W. H. Bergheimer, Jr. Several fine new sets have been built and special costumes designed.

The "Medea" of Euripides will be produced the same Thursday evening in the Carnegie Little Theater, with an eurythmic chorus directed by Miss Cecil Kitcat. The Gilbert Murray translation will be used. This play will run for six nights.

Sarah C. Pettit's heredity drama, "The Guest," is being put on at Irene Kaufmann Settlement next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings under direction of Louis Isaacs.

The youngest dramatic group of the I. K. S. is producing "Racketty-Packetty House" this Sunday evening.

The Epworthian Players, directed by D. M. Hall, youngest of our embryo Belascos, have assembled a promising cast for "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," in which John J. Davis will act the Stranger. This performance is scheduled for the first week of April.

During the current week several interesting things have been staged, including a new play by a local playwright—"Ali Baba" by Beatrice Lewis at the Twentieth Century auditorium, presented by the Golden Triangle players this Saturday morning. The Gargoyle Club of Shady Side Academy, directed by Ray Hurd, played "The Goose Hangs High" yesterday in the Curry Gymnasium.

Fast Comedy In Warner

By MARY SHINE

There's a fast-moving feature picture in the Warner this week, lots of wise cracks, plenty of action, and some unusual photographic effects in the beginning.

"I've Got Your Number" is the title of the show about a telephone operator entangled with an unscrupulous gang of crooks, whose methods are so smooth they are never caught until they meet a certain telephone repairman, detective, and rapid-fire conversationalist combined.

Pat O'Brien, as the repairman, has fun with wire-tappers and likes especially to repair the telephones of lovely damsels. His wire-tapping propensities are a big aid, however, when he is about to be taken for a ride by a gang of swindlers. And the cause of his being in such a predicament is Marie, the telephone girl, played by the come-hitherish Joan Blondell for whom he cherishes intentions matrimonial.

Marie has been arrested as an accomplice to the unapprehended criminals who have stolen large amounts of money from two of her employers. Pat tracks down the criminals via tapped wires and cellar windows, but the tables are turned and he is captured by them. Then everyone gets into a rousing street brawl with Pat's loyal friends, who rush to his aid. There are still corners to be rounded and ragged edges to be smoothed however, before the fade-out, and it's an amusing show.

Echoes From Cabarets

By THE ROUNDER

Caryl Bergman, who makes her first American cabaret appearance in the Tent Club, second floor Duquene Garden, tonight, is said to possess America's most beautiful pair of eyes. As Bob Rosenwalty, Tent Club manager puts it, "the eyes have it." Miss Bergman is a Ziegfeld "Follies" girl who achieved stage prominence when she was given Marylin Miller's part in "Rio Rita." She later starred in "Sweet Adeline" and "Rosalie." Later she played in Paris and London.

Knickerbocker Tells Why Italy Arms In Fear of Nazis Taking Over Austria

deemed" by Italy from Austria after the war contains 250,000 Germans. Five years ago the Italian government announced that the South Tyrol had been completely Italianized. But the 250,000 Germans still are Germans.

Trieste and the South Tyrol make together one big reason why it is impossible to prophesy positively that war will not come in this part of Europe. Today 40,000 Italian soldiers are under arms in Bolzano, chief city of the South Tyrol. They are there to "keep the Nazis from taking Austria." Nevertheless cool appraisal of the possibilities make it seem to an outside observer unlikely that war will come, even if Austria does "go Nazi."

ITALY WORRIED

Yet Italy is worried now as never before since the war. Until Hitler came to power in Germany the Italian possession of the provinces she took from Austria seemed as secure as her possession of any part of her land. On the other side of the Brenner pass was only little Austria, a nation of seven million with an army of 20,000. Italy felt safer than she had felt in centuries.

The Austro-Hungarian empire with its 57,000,000 inhabitants, its ambitous monarchy, its limitless desire for territorial expansion, had always threatened Italy. When the breakup of that empire came and left tiny Austria, a comfortable little pillow between Italy and the German Reich, Italy felt the solution was ideal.

Today in place of the Austro-Hungarian empire of 57,000,000 ambitious but nevertheless easy-going Hapsburg subjects, there is about to appear on the northern frontier of Italy a nation of 72,000,000 German Nazis who may be a number of things, but not easy-going. The South Tyrol would be one step away from the Nazi Tyrol. Trieste would be one hop from the border.

STRONGER GERMANY

Tomorrow Germany, the greater Germany, a Germany stronger than ever before, may be within one short step of Trieste.

is at any rate one of the chief reasons for the Italian excitement. Whether Germany or anybody in authority in Germany would contemplate taking that short step seems improbable for at least as far as one can foresee. But that is not sufficient for Italy.

She is worried enough to have ordered her crack army corps, a motorized corps capable of moving at 30 miles an hour with all equipment, from Verona to Bolzano, within striking distance of the Austrian frontier. The new military roads could carry the 40,000 men of the crack corps over the Brenner in a night's march.

DUCE FOR PEACE

Rome Orders Crack Army Corps to Troubled Area

peace. He does not want to use the Bolzano army corps. He has tried to bind the present Austria and Hungary to Italy by economic ties, and to strengthen them to resist the Nazi push. Today he has given Austria the right to import through Trieste, cotton, coffee, cocoa and a series of other articles, not only duty free, but with a rebate on handling charges that amounts to the freight from Trieste to Vienna. These and other economic measures will be tried. Nevertheless the Italian army corps in Bolzano still represents the most important real political element in the "Austrian problem."

Trieste, Fiume, all Northern Italy are constantly aware that army corps is there. Elsewhere only the chancelleries of Berlin, Paris, London are sufficiently alive to Europe's troubles to be wondering today what it means. Would it march? If it did, then what?

Only Rome knows the answers.

Mr. Knickerbocker's articles Monday and Tuesday will be an interview with Premier Mussolini, of Italy. The first installment will appear Monday. Mussolini gives his views on "Will War Come? He discusses frankly with Knickerbocker the Austrian situation, the Polish corridor and other problems that threaten the peace of Europe.

One Commodity That's Overlooked In the Big Rush

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Washington is worried over the price and purity of liquor.

People who claimed repeal would increase crime are wrong. The only way we could increase that would be with a 30-hour day.

The White House is going after whisky and wines. Pecora is going after oil, motors and steel. Seems strange that nobody is going after water.

Baker Union Dispute Hearing Completed

G. O. P. VICTORY FORECAST BY MARTIN

A prediction that the Republican party would sweep the fall election was made by Gen. Edward Martin, state chairman, speaking before the Women's Republican Club of Western Pennsylvania at its celebration of the 78th anniversary of the party, last night in McCreery's.

The presence of all factions of the G. O. P. would see considerable more harmony in the party than has prevailed in past years.

Senator James J. Coyne was absent and nobody mentioned him. U. S. Senator David A. Reed, also was absent, but he was represented. Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, appeared, but left for another engagement.

A tremendous ovation was tendered former Mayor John S. Herron, and Gen. Martin, speaking of it later, declared:

"If the election were held tomorrow we couldn't count all the votes."

Mrs. A. W. Powell, president of the club, presided and introduced Gen. Martin and Thomas W. Phillips, candidate for Governor. Other Republican leaders from this and other counties introduced included: Edward Lowber Stokes, of Philadelphia, candidate for Governor; State Senator Frank J. Harris, a probable candidate for the same office; Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport; Judge Ralph H. Smith; E. R. Crawford, Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, Prothonotary John Vogt, Judge Sara Soffel, Mrs. Hannah Patterson, of the Citizens' League; Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, Mrs. Walter Riggs, County Chairman W. H. Coleman and City Chairman W. J. Soost.

SPECIAL MUSIC IN EDGEWOOD

Earl Mitchell, organist, will direct the quartet and vesper chorus in a special program of Lenten music by Mozart at the 4:30 p. m. services of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Amberson avenue, tomorrow.

Autoist Cleared In Woman's Death

Not guilty but pay the costs, was the verdict of a Criminal Court jury that tried George J. Simon, 45, of 117 Highland avenue, West View, for involuntary manslaughter. His automobile had killed Mrs. Alma E. Johnston, 303 Mt. Troy road, on the highway in Reserve Township near her home last October 15.

Kevin Advises Pippin to Study Hard, Warns Against Being Dazzled By Fun

Youth Is Puzzled Because Girl Is So Gay

What Has Gone Before

Pippin, pretty daughter of Chickie, and Kathie McPike laughingly appeal to Kathie's foster-brother, Kevin Malone, to take them to their first dance. Kevin promises. Then, teased by the two girls because he is eight years older than they, he seizes Pippin and kisses her. Pippin goes home to her mother to secure permission to go to the dance, astonished and thrilled at the first real kiss she had ever known.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER II.

They were only crystals hanging from the chandeliers. Only roses blooming on the table. And music no better than she heard every day over the radio.

But for Pippin who had never been dancing before, the room was a whirl of unearthly beauty. The moon and the stars glowed in the ceiling and a heavenly garden filled the air with perfume.

She hummed against the young man's heart.

"Feel like that?" Kevin asked.

"Oh, entrancing. This place is so beautiful, and doesn't the music sort of clutch your throat and make you want to do all kinds of wild, adventurous things?"

"You haven't acted as though you felt that way to your poor young friend there."

The girl flung up a bubbling laugh. "Not with him, darling. He's no inspiration to madness." She glanced up to his eyes, impish and daring. "It would have to be someone thrilling like you, Kevin—only young. Oh, dear, I'm afraid you've spoiled me for my own generation. You've given me ideas they can never fulfill."

They danced five times together. She followed his lead as a song follows music.

She said: "You darling! I didn't dream you'd treat me this grand. And how you dance!"

She thought him terribly strong and terribly handsome.

"Why are you having such a good time Pippin?"

"Oh, man, can you ask! When I go floating across that floor in all that color and perfume, I feel as though a tidal wave, all lighted up, was sweeping me up mountains and down valleys."

Something in her voice, in the eerie shine of her hair in the moonlight, caught Kevin with a pang. It was too soon for her to feel like this, to think like this.

Kevin Afraid

Without knowing why, he felt afraid. Pippin always disturbed him like this.

"Say, little girl" he said, on a deep breath, "if you talk that way I'll be sorry I got you here."

She gave a rippling laugh. "I can say much wilder things than this," with a bold wink, "and feel them too."

"But you don't want to go riding tidal waves for five or six years yet."

"Not THE tidal wave, of course. But I'll try a few minor ripples, just to get in practice."

She touched his arm, a taint sigh in her voice. "Kevin, why are you all afraid for Kathleen and me?"

"I'm not afraid; what makes you think that?"

"Yes, you are. So are Chickie and Mary. But when Jon went to his first dance mother didn't go about in a kind of weepy flutter."

"Well, you see, Pippin, girls haven't been out in the world so long. Perhaps we're a little afraid you don't know your way. Somebody might crook you out of the real thing. And we don't like those minor ripples. They might sweep you downstream to a whirlpool."

Warns Pippin

"Oh, darling, you don't think we'd be old-fashioned and get ruined, do you? What a coy thought!"

"Besides," Kevin went on, ignoring her interruption, "you've got a swell brain, Pippin. It's going to be a darn shame if you let them turn you into an empty little butterfly. When you start college don't get dazzled by the fun. Don't let fellows turn your head. You study hard as if you were a man."

"You won't be here, Kevin?"

"No—I'll be in Europe six months from now."

"So soon?—What will I do without you?" She gave a rapt sigh. "Kevin, will I have fellows—lot of them? Do you think college men will really like me?"

"They'll like you and plenty. You're to write and tell me of your conquests."

She looked up, teasing and radiant: "That's not fair to the poor boys. How can I fall for them, Kevin, if I keep the image of you in my mind?"

He grinned and flushed. "Keep the image of me in your mind, Pippin, and leave those little ripples alone."

She gave him a merry laugh.

"Dance with me and I'll be good. But when I'm bad, I'm better—as the naughty lady says."

She swept into his arms, a song in her heart. It trilled with a strange, joyous pain; "How sweet to love, if only one found someone intoxicating—like you are—beautiful Kevin!"

Waits for Daughter

Chickie sat in the living room. Images of Pippin, lovely and uncertain with a shine in her flower-like eyes and her hair like a nimbus, came before her. So tender—so thrilling to be just starting out—all of life before one. And so heart-pinching!

She gave up trying to read.

"Why, darling," the girl trilled, unpinning gardenias and dropping them in Chickie's hands, "not waiting up for me?. You're not going to put on the big mother act and darken my young life, are you?"

"May I sit up for David? He was called on emergency. You had a wonderful time, I see."

"And George? Is he very exciting?"

"What are you? Isn't he two years your senior?"

"In years—yes—but I'm much older in experience You see, the way we've lived has aged me."

"Oh, certainly—the upbringing would be wrong!"

Chickie followed Pippin about, picking up the dress as it dropped from slim shoulders, and now stuffing little velvet forms into the gay evening slippers. Just like this, on a night 25 years ago, little Jennie had followed Chickie about—had asked trembling: "Do you KISS any of those young men?"

Recalls Girlhood Days

"Why, I think it was delicious—I mean my upbringing. It's made me so sophisticated, having all your friends and David's giving me strange ideas. I'm easily 20 mentally. The only trouble is you and David won't treat me as if I were."

"We all went out to the Koffee Kup and had waffles."

"And afterwards?"

"What do you mean, mother? Do you think we stole off to the old apple tree to do the 'deed of darkness?' Not with little Georgie, thank you."

"Pippin!"

"Why mother, you don't mind if I quote Shakespeare, do you?"

Chickie answered with a dreamy smile: How different was this girl from that other who stood on a hilltop and thought the world all beauty because a boy had brushed her lips with his!

The moment the door closed, Pippin sank happily to the pillows. Her thoughts drifted back through the music of the night. Again and again one scene passed. She saw Kevin standing on the balcony, his face so romantic, so handsome in the moonlight.

With a vague yearning, she put her fingers on her lips. Tears came to her eyes; she whispered to herself:

Radio Songs No Longer Censored

By AIRCASTER

Any alert ear must have noticed by this time that the radio networks have virtually abolished their former strict censorship over song lyrics. (Naughty, naughty.)

The watchdogs who waded through verses and choruses a few months back have lost their jobs.

When he returned to the old suite yesterday for the final load of impedimenta, he noted that some inspired wit had hung a sign on the old office door: "Lennie doesn't live here any more."

RADIOCIDE

The pages of recent history reveal a number of instances where people have been killed for turning on radio sets.

On Tuesday night, however, an Oil City (Pa.) cub reporter made the front page with the account of the 17-year-old lad who had killed his old father for turning off the radio.

Globe Trotter

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Don't ask me to justify my course of conduct. That's just what I have been trying to do, but I don't think I have been altogether successful.

Days without end I have championed the cause of the underprivileged bird. The early pre-spring arrival heralding the approach of summer's gladness only to be snowed under by a late winter blizzard. That part is okey.

What is troubling me now is the statement I made about the starlings, discriminating against them so far as to suggest ways and means for their eradication.

Harry Steding, North Side, related how once in Philadelphia the fire hose was used to drown them out of a theater and Charles Phillips advocated the use of tear gas Ray Sprigle, you know, bombards them with Roman Candles.

To my best recollection they were imported from England to eat up a certain plant bug, now a lot of people want to see them eaten up. There must be a good reason for this change of attitude toward starlings.

If you have knowledge of depradations caused by starlings, will you send it in?

The recent paragraphs on old coins, stamps and antiques prompted a letter from Earl Eberly Leyda, Bellevue. Mr. Leyda, in his life time, has been a collector of cigar bands, chewing gum wrappers and silver foil, but his prize possession is the family Bible nearly 400 years old.

It bears entries in its parchment pages from 1706. Two hundred years before that it was unlawful to possess a Bible so no owner of this one had the temerity to write his name in it.

Mr. Leyda comments that the Guttenberg Bibles were printed about this time. Is there an authority on old book values in the house?

STOCK MARKET LOSSES ONLY FRACTIONAL

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Some further selling carried over from yesterday into the early stock trading today. Recessions were generally fractional. A few shares were slightly higher. Trading was quiet.

New York Central dipped more than a point and losses averaging ½ point were shown by United States Steel, American Commercial Alcohol, North American, General Motors and Bethlehem. American Can, American Telephone and United Aircraft were steady to a shade higher.

Aside from attempting to interpret activities at Washington, brokerage circles scanned the weekly report of the Federal Reserve System with much interest.

The report revealed a rise in the system's gold certificates, on hand and due from the Treasury, of $130,000,000, while, at the same time, the country's monetary gold stock increased $114,000,000. The difference in the two totals was accounted for by additional sales of certificates to Reserve banks by the Treasury, representing gold which it bought abroad and which was bought by the RFC abroad in stabilization operations before resumption of the "modified" gold standard.

The gain in brokers' loans of $97,000,000, in the face of comparatively slow business on the stock exchange, waa attributed in some quarters partly to requirements incident to recent Treasury financing.

A further sign of economic improvement was seen in an increase during the week in bank clearings throughout the country. Dun & Bradstreet found that, for the first time in many months, each of 21 cities in the compilation showed a gain over last year.

The British pound, in early transactions, was unchanged at $5.07½ and the French franc was slightly lower at 6.55½ cents.

GRAINS SUFFER NEW LOSSES

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Fresh downturns of grain prices early today accompanied forecasts of new snowfalls tonight in Kansas and Nebraska. Wheat price losses were, despite authoritative statements that the most serious factor of crop damage apprehension still remained in the shape of widespread shortage of sub-soil moisture. Opening ⅛ to ¾ lower, May 87⅜-¾, wheat afterward fell further. Corn started unchanged to ¼ off, and subsequently underwent an all-around sag.

ENGINEERING CONTINUES ACTIVE

Securities on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange maintained a steady tone in the short week-end session today while the "big board" list jostled about in an endeavor to right itself following yesterday's sharp reaction. Buying of United Engineering and Foundry featured the dealings again on the local board. The stock was steadily taken around the best figures attained on the current upturn. Most of the dealings in Engineering were in small lots with the demand holding steady throughout the session. Other heavy industrials were quiet and showed only minor variations from their previous prices.

The fuels continued to hang back despite the weather factor which continues favorable to an expanding send-out of gas. Lone Star was dull as was Western Public Service. However, the absence was balanced by a lack of pressure on either issue. Brewings were also very quiet and the miscellaneous industrial specialty group provided only a little of the day's activity.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Loans on stocks and bonds to brokers and dealers by reporting Federal Reserve member banks in New York City, increased $97,000,000 during the week ended February 22 to $950,000,000 from $853,000,000 in the week preceding. This compares with the record high of $6,804,000,000 on October 2, 1929, and the record low of $331,000,000 on July 27, 1932.

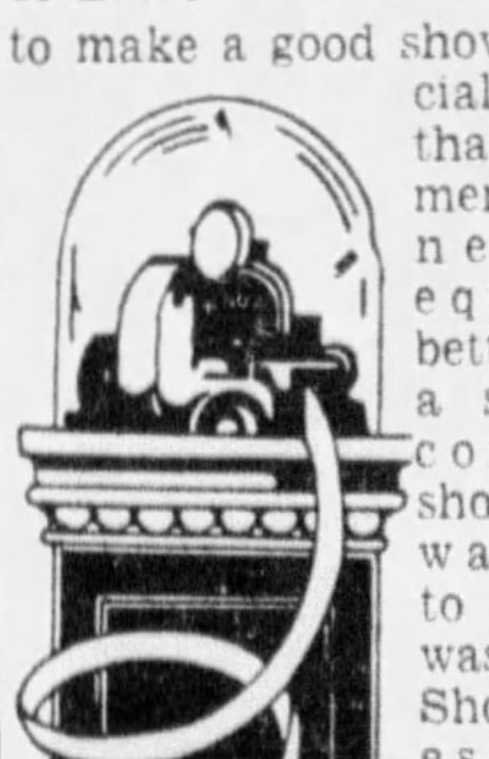
Loose Wiles Biscuit Expected to Report 1933 Earnings Higher Than Previous Year



The forthcoming annual report of Loose-Wiles Biscuit is expected to make a good showing. Unofficially it is said that the statement will reveal net income equivalent to better than $2.70 a share on the common. The showing for 1932 was equivalent to $2.04 a share was reported. Should current estimates be borne out the financial position of the company may similarly be expected to reveal some measure of improvement. An increase, such as that indicated above, would contrast with the showing made by National Biscuit in 1933 as compared with 1932. The big company reported net equivalent to $2.11 a share as against $2.44 a share the year previous.

The textile industry, after a moderate lull in the latter months of 1933, has started 1934 with a outburst of activity. Operating conditions have been greatly improved through elimination of cut-throat competition by the NRA codes. Standard Statistics Company, in a new survey, says operating conditions, largely due to the codes, "are now on the soundest basis since before the war." The survey says that average prices for all fabrics are currently some 50 per cent above the levels prevailing a year ago, while cottons, which account for some 70 per cent of the total textile business, show even wider price advances.

Demand for women's wear fabrics continued active in wool goods markets this week, says the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. But men's wear cloths were rather slow. The market took a stronger statistical position when it was learned that stocks of spring goods had become scarce. Most of these goods have gone into consumption.

The American Glass Review says: "Encouraging prospects for the future have been the most interesting developments in the glass industry during the week. Both demand and production are being maintained at good levels and there are no complaints from manufacturers who remember the situation as it existed one year ago. Production of plate glass, liquor glassware and containers persists at relatively high levels. Not in more than five years have manufacturers been in receipt of so many inquiries. Because of the activity in automobile production, producers of safety glass continue operations at capacity."

The use of "Columbin" a rare element, in the manufacture of stainless steel which has to stand extreme heat and corrosion, has been announced by Dr. F. N. Decket and R. Franks, of the Union Carbide and Carbon Research Laboratories, Inc. The new element which heretofore has been largely a laboratory curiosity, helps prevent intergranular corrosion of steel.

The Federal Reserve statistics, out a day late because of the holiday, revealed a rise of about $130,000,000 in gold certificates on hand and due from the Treasury, reflecting the week's extensive gold import transactions. Brokers' loans hopped up $97,000,000, probably due in part to requirements incident to recent Treasury financing. New York City member banks increased earnings assets $174,000,000. Loans on securities jumped $92,000,000 but other loans were slightly off. Government security investments expanded $105,000,000 and there was a small gain in holdings of other securities.

Uncompleted business carried over into 1934 amounted to $1,799,509 compared to $492,594 carried over into 1933. President Lorenz Iversen stated that the prospects of the company for 1934 are very much brighter than they were at the outset of 1933.

Midland Steel Products Company and subsidiaries report for year 1933 shows net profit of $672,728 after depreciation, taxes, provision for deposits in closed banks, etc., equal to $8.94 a share on 96,930 shares of 8 per cent first preferred stock. This compares with net loss of $221,295 in 1932. As of December 31, 1933, current assets including cash and government securities of $4,599,855 totaled $6,819,794 against current liabilities of $667,673. HOPEFUL SIGN IN CAUTION AT WASHINGTON

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Feb. 24. In several respects there seems to be some tendency to check the extreme radical trend at Washington and to recognize the difficulties and dangers of scrapping our tried institutions. This, I think, is a hopeful indication.

The President recognizes that the freedom of the press is not to be abrogated.

Congress continues to show more or less independence. We may deplore some of the actions of that body, but after all, it is the agency of representative government.

For example, although the President favors the St. Lawrence Waterway development, there is so much opposition in Congress that it is doubtful that the scheme will go through. At least, all interests will be well considered.

There are even signs that the administration may decide to forego some of its radical program in order to end the congressional session when it wants to.

COMMERCE DIFFICULTY

The remains of the powers of the states are also proving conservative factors. The federal government still finds its schemes hampered by difficulties in controlling "intrastate commerce." Courts in Florida and Texas have ruled that, on business within their bounds, federal regulations may not apply.

Then there are the great clashes of interest among groups of producers in different industries or sections of the country. A collectivist government finds that when it helps one group, it is apt to hurt another. The resulting clash being focused on Washington, political caution is compelled.

Thus when the government undertakes to pro-rate sugar production, it hears from the domestic sugar interests whose output it would reduce, and promptly "soft pedals."

Even the interests of "consumers" are exercising some restraint on radical action, when they have enough votes. The government appears to be bringing action against the meat packers for price control, although the packers, if guilty at all, are doing no more than a good many other industrial groups under their NRA "codes."

The President is reported to be concerned about the high price of whisky. The high prices of cotton goods have been criticized by government agents, although AAA and NRA rules caused them.

SPECULATION PERIL

The force of economic laws is also being seen. Secretary Wallace clearly states that we have to choose between losing foreign markets and cutting production to the limited domestic market. The danger of runaway speculative markets seems to be generally recognized at Washington.

We have recently heard nothing of that 1926 price level as an objective. Prof. Warren's gold juggling scheme is history.

Now China is reported to be objecting to the scheme to raise the price of silver on the ground that it would disturb her currency and hurt business. This may put a crimp in the idea of "doing something for silver."

NRA is much less "cocky," and seems to be trying to adopt more elastic policies. The President is willing that the securities act be amended, and has disavowed responsibility for the stock exchange regulation bill. It is pretty generally agreed that the airway action was hasty.

Thus in many ways, the new dealers are learning from their responsibilities. Washington's birthday brings us assurance that some of the individual freedom for which Washington fought will yet be preserved.

STEEL OUTLOOK CONTINUES BRIGHT

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel has risen sharply in the last three weeks. The week ended February 3 was officially forecast at 34.4 per cent of capacity, while this week was foremost at 43.5 per cent, representing an increase of fully one-fourth.

Production this week may be estimated at 45 per cent, through mills running above their schedules, as the official reports showed they did in January and December. The rate is two-thirds above the average rate of last November, the low month since April, and was exceeded last year only for two and a half months, during the summer.

While railroad buying has been relatively active, little railroad steel was rolled even this week, and further increase in steel production will occur on account of railroad demand. The increase in production since November has been almost wholly in steel for highly miscellaneous uses and for the automobile industry.

The proportion of steel now being made that is going to the automobile industry can be estimated only approximately, because the flow may not be in close relationship to the current rate of automobile production, probably 65,000 or 70,000 units weekly, because on the one hand some makers will have stocks of steel while on the other hand there is preparation for heavier production.

50 PER CENT RATE NEAR

A fair guess is that with steel ingots being produced at 45 per cent of capacity, the automobile industry accounts for nine or 10 points. Averages are more readily estimated. The automobile industry now expects the year's total production to be fully 3,000,000 units.

It is regarded as clear that a steel producing rate of 50 per cent will be reached within about three weeks, and that without any very notable activity in any individual consuming line. Improvement in general business would increase the miscellaneous demand and there is also the seasonal influence. It begins to appear that while at the opening of the year attainment of a 60 per cent rate was well-night inconceivable it is now a distinct possibility. Whether or not there will be the traditional summer lull is a puzzle.

Freight car building will absorb a fair tonnage of steel in the next few months. A large tonnage will be required eventually for repairs, but the time is uncertain. As the season for track work approaches there will be releases for rolling a substantial tonnage of rails contracted for in the last few months, together with new orders for early rolling. The Pennsylvania Railroad is releasing steel at a rapid rate for its electrification in the east, the contracts having been placed a couple years ago.

For two years awards of structural steel contracts have been at about a uniform general average, giving the fabricating industry shipments of 15,000 to 20,000 net tons a week. There are possibilities that PWA work will cause an increase, while the gradual appearance in the last few weeks of commercial work suggests that soon there may be more of that. Volume of all fabricated work in the last two years has been about one-third that in the active period.

Farm implement makers are slowly increasing their steel buying but do not seem to have definite programs for the season. Unfavorable weather has held back demand for concrete reinforcing bars and other steel for road building, but a fair demand is expected, together with demand for equipment.

The tin plate mills continue operating at about 60 per cent, having averaged under 40 per cent since the first of the year up to last week, when there was a jump to 60 per cent. Exports account for approximately one-sixth of current production.

Heavy melting steel scrap is quiet but firm at $14.50, to which it advanced a week ago on the basis of one large and some small sales, the advance in scarcely more than a fortnight being $1 a ton.

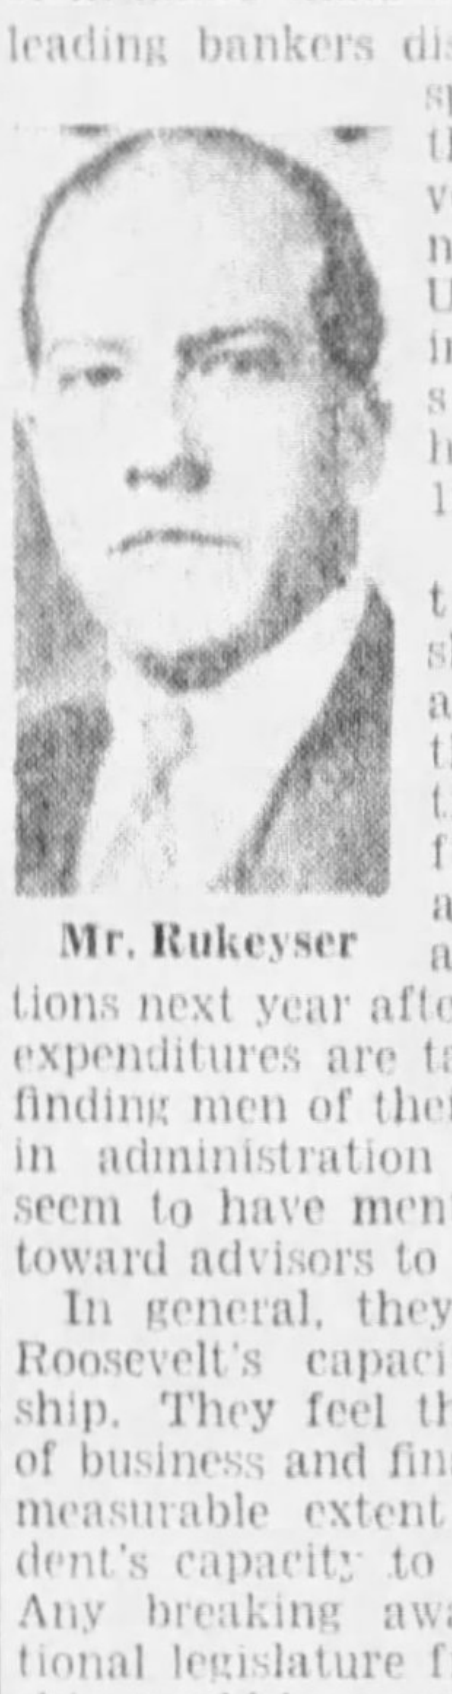
N. Y. FINANCIERS SEE PICKUP FOR 1934

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service.



Mr. Rukeyser

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—A series of intimate chats with New York's leading bankers discloses a widespread belief that the gross volume of business in the United States in 1934 will be substantially higher than in 1933.

Accordingly, they see no shoals immediately ahead, but these conservative folk are frankly a little apprehensive about conditions next year after governmental expenditures are tapered off. Not finding men of their own choosing in administration counsels, they seem to have mental reservations toward advisors to the President.

In general, they recognize Mr. Roosevelt's capacity for leadership. They feel that the welfare of business and finance hinge to a measurable extent on the President's capacity to sway Congress. Any breaking away of the national legislature from his leadership would be construed as an untoward development.

AIR MAIL ACTION HIT

The "Street" has been frankly critical of the cancellation of the air mail contracts. There is a feeling that the administration will deal more tenderly with ship subsidies. American shipping companies have been operating in the red during the depression, and are just at the threshold of getting into the black, through the aid of juicy mail contracts. The shipping interests want to maintain the status quo in regard to government aid. They feel that, though they haven't been making any money, the existing setup gives them a chance for substantial profit as traffic picks up.

Recently the trend in shipping has been upward. Lately ships moving to the Orient especially have reported better cargoes.

FLEXIBLE MARGINS

The suggestion of making margins flexible is well taken. Unless transactions through brokers are to be carried on on a cash basis at all times, which might be the ideal technique, flexibility is urgently needed. Panics are usually quieted by reducing margin requirements after deflation. Banking experience has demonstrated the wisdom of requiring high coverage when prices are inflated and reducing the percentage of marginal requirements when prices have been deflated.

This is just another way of saying that lending should be more than an automatic machine process. Any legal rigidity in margin requirements might serve merely to heighten the length and severity of periods of forced liquidation.

Perhaps there is something absurd in seeking by legislation formulae to make speculation safe for the public. In the nature of things, speculators are the risk bearers for society. Their very function is to accept hazards. If the politicians give traders the impression that they can make speculation riskless, the naive will get a false sense of security.

Customers' Man Gives Exchange Problem

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

Business Editor

THE STOCK EXCHANGE regulation bill—President Whitney's proposal for regulation of an entirely different type—the wide divergence of opinion on the measures to be taken to protect the public—the dangers of regulatory measures which may cause more harm than good—all this maze of opinion leaves the average person in confusion on the question of what to do about Wall street.

Most thinking persons will admit that an exchange which makes it easy for an investor to buy or to sell is advantageous. The need for exchanges is recognized. The problem is to prevent abuses and not to abolish the entire system.

In the maelstrom of public opinion, one of the vital influences in the business appears to have been neglected. Little has been said about the customers' man and the part that he plays—and the things he does which cost the speculator money.

Customers' Man Gets Business

THE CUSTOMERS' MAN provides the contact between the broker and the trader. The customers' man is the business getter for the broker. He cannot be paid a commission under stock exchange rules, but if he does not earn enough to justify his salary, he will be fired.

Brokers make their money out of commissions. They earn nothing from an inactive account. Accordingly, the customers' man must provide clients to do enough trading to give his firm enough commissions to make it worth while to pay his salary.

In order to do this the customers' man must keep his clients trading in an out of the market frequently. The client who buys 1,000 shares of United States Steel today and does not sell it until 1936 will be a dead loss to the broker and no justification for paying a salary to a customers man. But if a client with the same resources can be persuaded to make frequent purchases and sales, to switch from one stock to another his account will be profitable to the broker and it will help the customers' man to earn his salary.

Switches May Be Desirable

AT TIMES CHANGES in market positions may be dictated by sound reasoning. Switches from one stock to another may be desirable in many instances. But they cost the customer money in commissions and, unless there is good reason for making these frequent changes, they are advantageous to no one but the broker and the customers' man.

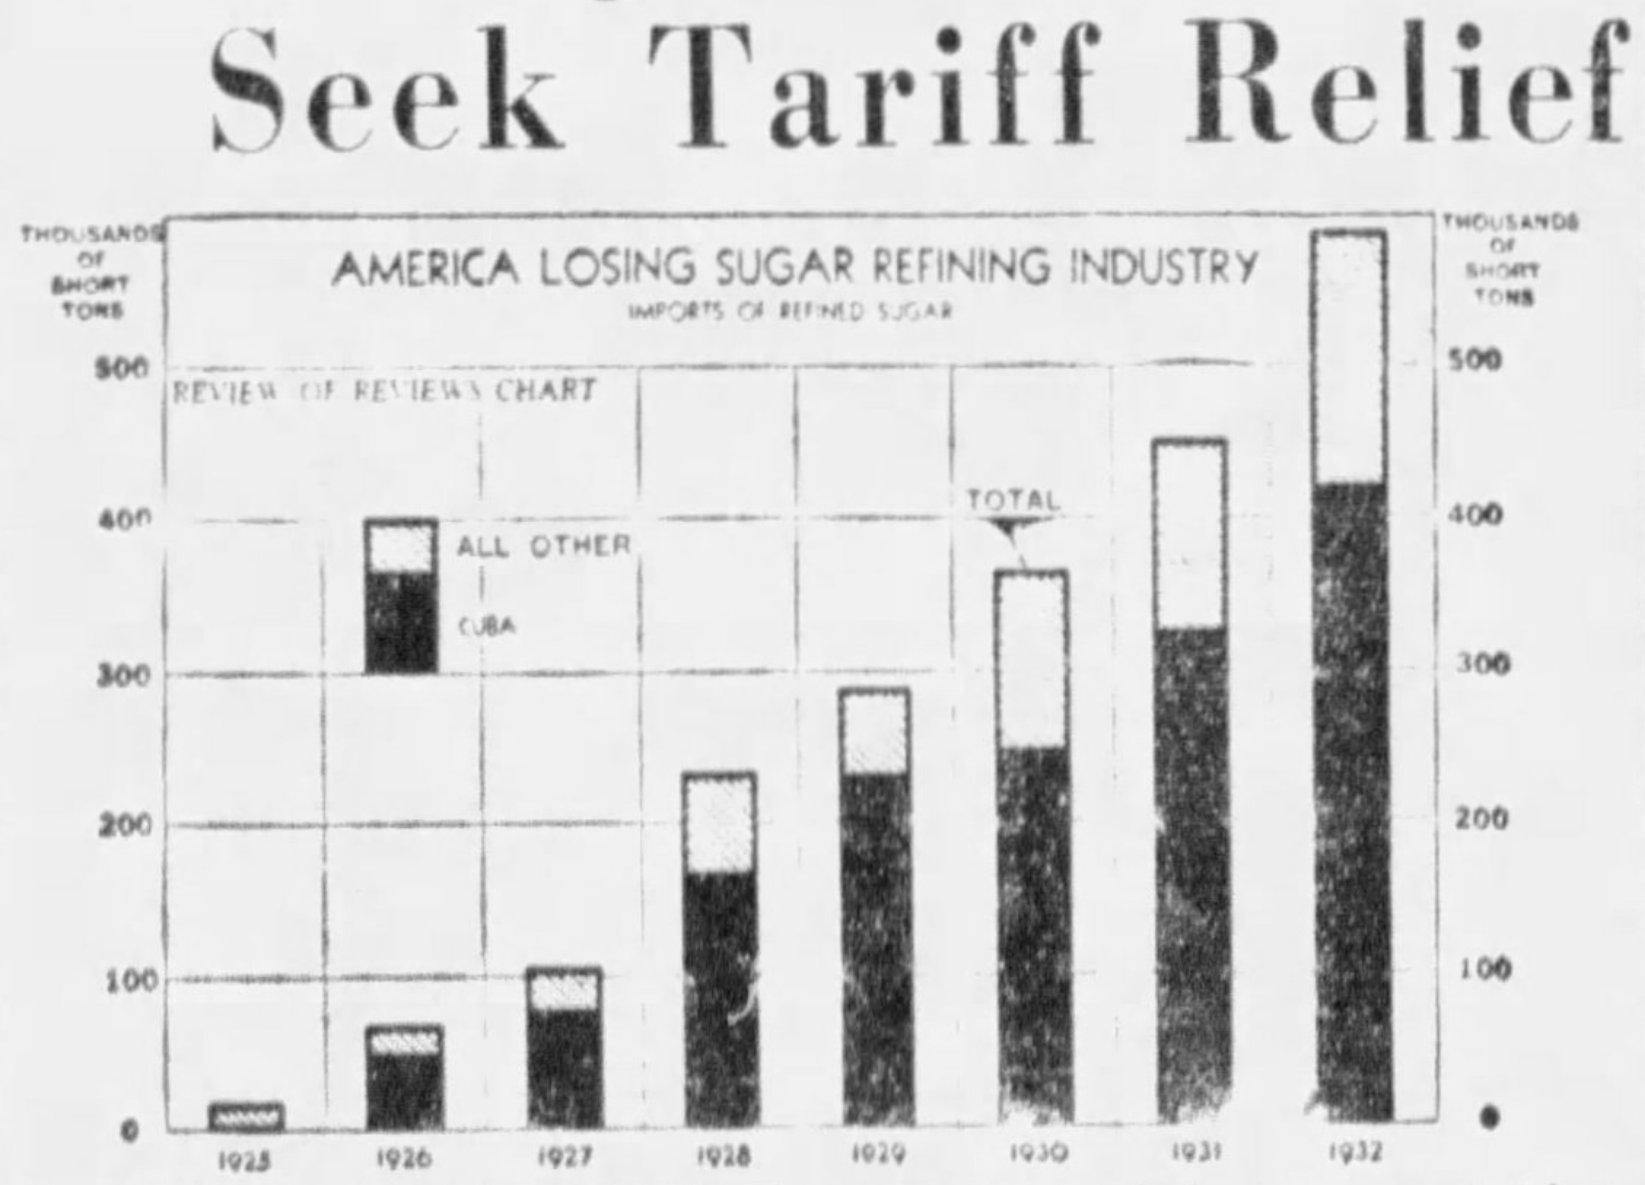
There is a conflict of interest between broker and customer. The broker wants frequent trades to get commissions. The customer wants to make money. The customer may do this by buying and holding for years or he may do it by frequent trades. The average customers' man and broker wants commissions. Next he wants his customer to make money, but commissions come first. And commissions eat up many brokerage accounts.

The abolition of the customers' man and the substitution of clerks who merely take buying and selling orders might destroy many evils of Wall street. Rumors and tips stimulate buying and selling. Therefore customers' men spread these rumors.

Most of the proposed means for controlling speculation are aimed at secondary evils. The customers' man is the primary evil.

He should be the subject of major attention.

U. S. Sugar Refiners Seek Tariff Relief



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

Review of Reviews

The American sugar refining industry is up in arms. It seems that foreign refineries, located principally in Cuba, are making serious inroads upon refined sugar production in this country. The phenomenal growth of these imports may be noted from the chart. The predominant contribution of Cuba to these imports is similarly indicated.

The difficulty is due to the fact that refined sugar enjoys no preferential duty as compared to raw sugar. In other words, the duty of 2 cents which raw Cuban sugar pays is likewise paid by refined sugar. The net result is that the refining process in America, carried on by highly paid American labor, enjoys no protection whatsoever as compared to the poorly paid Negro labor employed in Cuban refineries. It resolves itself into a competitive struggle between the American workingman, enjoying a typically high standard of living, and the Cuban worker, who requires less and receives less than the American.

As a result of the failure of the American tariff to afford any protection, thousands of workers in this country have lost their jobs and have been displaced, not by other American workers, but by poorly paid laborers in low standard areas outside of this country.

In addition to this great injustice to the American worker, the policy is inconsistent with the entire philosophy of the New Deal. The central theme of this philosophy is that America should be exploited by and for Americans, and that applies not only to natural resources, but also to our markets. The high costs which American business is forced to embrace under the codes can be defended only if it is assured a reasonably protected domestic market.

This principle of protection for some curious reason has not been applied to the sugar refining industry.

DEVIL'S ISLAND

By GORDON SINCLAIR

CHAPTER XXII

CAYENNE, French Guiana—Ask any convict in the Guiana bad lands what brought him to the home town of horrors on the hoof and he'll snap:

"Killed my mistress."

Always a mistress and if you give the convict half a chance, he'll elaborate with romantic details. A blonde . . . beautiful . . . talented . . . the toast of Paris . . . or Nancy . . . or Cannes . . . diamonds . . . caviar . . . satin cushions and all that stuff.

I mentally ticketed all this talk under the heading of hooey and tried to shift the palaver toward other things. But women and escape are the stock conversational channels and it's hard work shifting off into new ground.

But one afternoon at siesta time—and even the convicts follow this old Spanish custom—I dug into musty gray files to see what actually did bring 700 men to these shark-surrounded shores every year.

Grim Record

It was grim, depressing work because of the fatalistic margin notations. "Dead." "Missing." "Dead." "Dead." "Died." Attached to many record sheets were letters scribbled by convicts.

Complaints against guards, stinging letters about food, pleas for relief, complaints against the perfunctory examinations by doctors, a plea by a mother in France for the release of her son. The letter was addressed to the President of France. But her son was long beyond release. He had been fed to the tiger sharks.

Gradually I compiled a list. A haphazard list to be sure. But it showed that the average convice does, as a fact, come to the land of despair through some woman. He steals for her or from her, or he kills her, or confesses some crime and she squeals on him.

In the first 100 record sheets I found seven woman killers. All of these were dead. One man had written a long series of complaints about his teeth. His teeth were killing him, he wrote. They were driving him mad. And what kind of a prison was this that had no dentist? Every other prison he'd ever been in had a dentist! His list was an imposing one. He certainly had tried a flock of jails. But he would never be in another.

Convict Looks On

A fat convict with shiny, greasy skin watched me paw through the records. Pointing to the letters, I asked:

"Can any man write letters to the Governor?"

"But yes—and why not?"

"Can he write to his people back home in France?"

"Of course he can. His letters are opened and censored, yes. But only sometimes."

"Sometimes?"

"No letters to the President are ever censored."

"To the President?"

"Surely. The convicts write to the President. If they have complaints, they may write to the President, to any member of the Chamber of Deputies, to any member of the Department of Justice, or to any judge. None of such letters are opened."

"Does anything come of them?"

"Of course. Many times; yes. The letters come back here. You see them there. Many men have been transferred from one camp to another through letters. Some guards have lost their jobs through letters. There is that one Pierre. He writes the Judge who sent him here. He writes him by every mail boat and calls him a swine. He has been doing this six years and the judge sometimes answers."

I kept working away at my list. It's astonishing how much sex appeal you can excavate from dry-as-dust prison records. Love and intrigue and sweet cooings in the moonlight seemed to march right across the page. Plots for a hundred movies came bouncing out of the dust. There were a few letters from the girl back home that had been received after the convict's death or his escape. And did they confess all?

The fat fellow was blandly amused at my interest. Time for siesta was almost up when he said:

"Have a drink?"

"Sure. What have you got?"

He beckoned me to follow. We were on the top floor of the penitentiary headquarters. Convicts below were stirring from greasy beds and driving water buffaloes out to water.

We went downstairs to a big dark vault. The convict let himself in with a key. The place smelled of vineyards and wine vaults. He grinned:

"The chateau."

The windows were heavily shuttered. He flung one shutter open and we saw a long whitewashed room with pot-bellied wine jars lying on their sides.

Some of the corks were all crusted and green. All the bottles were covered with bamboo casings.

Samples Brands

The guide said:

"Medoc. Try the Medoc."

It was good wine.

"Try the Bordeaux."

I tried the Bordeaux. It was good, too.

"There is not much Burgundy left; you like the Burgundy, yes?"

I tried the Burgundy and started to laugh. So this is Devil's Island. A chest full of love letters. A convict who calls his sentencing judge a swine. Then calls him a swine again. And here I am trying to inject a little sex-appeal into a convict story and I get interrupted to sample the penitentiary wine list. Help, Watson; the needle!

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Dentists advise the use of dental floss when teeth are set far apart, have a way of picking up particles of food and wedging them in. But they also caution against the careless use of floss. If it is sawed back and forth, close to the gums, it will cut into the delicate tissues, form a wound that invites bacteria to enter. Brush the teeth at bedtime. That is important. Rinse the mouth well with a salt solution or any good mouth wash.

Upper eyelashes can get away with mascara. If they carry a light load of brown pigment, all right. It is when lower lashes are heavily painted that the face takes on a hard look and artifice is apparent. Dip the eyelash brush in water, shake almost dry, pass over the mascara cake, close the eye, apply the darkening agent with an upward sweep of the brush. To use any ordinary hair dye on the lashes is a hazardous experiment. We must protect against that practice.

Frameless, inconspicuous eye glasses are a relief from the owlish-looking tortoise shell affairs. They're dressier, too. If it is necessary to wear specs, let the man who waits on you trot out his whole stock. You'll be surprised at the different designs, made to flatter faces. It is time for the old prejudices against glasses to evaporate. Anyhow, if vision is impaired, it is vitally important they be worn. Impaired vision means dull, expressionless eyes and puts a woman out of the beauty race.

JUNIOR PATROL

That's an old slogan, but it is usually a true one. In your school work, building model airplanes, drawing a picture, practicing on the piano—no matter what it is, if you do it poorly, it is next to useless.

For instance, there is only one way to play a piano well and that is the right way. And in making model airplanes, like the job of making real ones, the smallest kind of a mistake spoils the whole thing.

Now here is a letter from Helen Biss, 107 North Fifth street, Overbrook, Jeannette, Pa. She sends 14 pledges and she wants seven others for more of her members. Looks as though there is going to be one of the biggest Junior Patrols in Jeannette.

And here is a letter from another new captain, Rosalie Abramovitz, of 153 Main street, Leechburg, Pa. She writes:

"Last year Dora and I organized a club with 17 members in it. Several of the girls, including myself, moved last summer. I came back last month and have reorganized the club. This time we have 14 members, but expect several more to join. I was elected captain, so please send me an armband. The club is going to be an art and needlework club. The girls are from 12 to 15 years old, and are all in the eighth grade. We are going to meet every Wednesday night at one of the members' homes. We will send you another letter some time next month."

That is fine and dandy, Rosalie, and we are happy to hear that you have started things going again up your way. And we think that your art and needlework club is a wonderful idea. It gives you all plenty of interesting work to do—work that is fun and worth doing too.

Maybe your girls could make some dresses for themselves. Please write often and let us know how you are getting along.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am,
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger,
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

BATTLE OF PEA RIDGE (ARKANSAS) MARCH 7-8, 1862—CIVIL WAR

This was the first decisive Union victory west of the Mississippi River, Gen. S. R. Curtis, of the Union Southwest army, defeating the Confederates commanded by Gen. Van Dorn.

This victory recovered Missouri for the Federalists. A border state, Missouri had been won by Gen. Lyon in 1861, but lost to the Confederates in the battle of Wilson Creek, where Gen. Lyon met heroic death (August 10, 1861). (U. S. History)

CORONATION OF CATHERINE II, THE GREAT OF RUSSIA, (1762 1796)

After the death of Peter the Great (d. 1725) the throne of the Czars was alternately occupied by members of his family according to the success of their conspiracies for power.

In 1762 Catherine II—usurping the throne from her husband, Peter III, became ruler.

Though her private life was immoral, achievements as sovereign earned her the title "the Great." She increased Russia with Crimea and territories up to the Dniester at Turkey's cost, by alliance with Prussia and Austria engineering the division of Poland, she gained the lion's share (1772, 1793, 1795).

In internal reforms she fostered industry, commerce, founded schools, charitable institutions, granted certain religious liberties. Her brilliant court fashioned after the French included famous men of easel, brush and pen. (World History)

EYE—"MIRROR OF SOUL"

The iris, a curtain before the lens, is a muscular ring with a central opening, the pupil. Its sphincter muscle contracts the pupil, dilitater muscles expand it, regulating by it the amount of light admitted.

Both the accommodation of the lens (flatens by looking afar, bulging by looking near) and size of the pupil are controlled by reflexes (responses not subject to voluntary control) working in association. These reflexes are transmitted by autonomic nerve fibers arising from mid-brain.

Normal pupilary reflex keeps pupils of both eyes equal, contracting in light and when looking near, expanding in shadow and when looking afar.

Emotional states (fear, horror), nervous exhaustion, concussion of brain, effects of some drugs (belladonna, cocaine, etc.) also dilate pupils. Impaired or sluggish pupilary reflex is an early sign of serious disease of central nervous system (paralysis, tabes dorsalis, insanity, etc.)

FIGHTING FOREST FIRE

Fire is the greatest enemy of the forest. It destroys not only the present and prospective tree growth, but also other values of great importance: felled timber, equipment, live stock, farm crops, buildings, seeds, seedlings, sprouts. It changes litter and humus—which cover forest grounds, keeping soil moist, preventing erosion—to ashes, easily washed away.

Each forest fire makes conditions more favorable for the next one until everything of value is destroyed and desolation follows.

MADELINE'S FATHER INSULTS NICHOLAS

Nicholas, employed by Mr. Cheeryble, takes mother, sister Kate from grip of usurer uncle, Ralph. They live happily with Smike, when the boy is kidnaped by Squeers' accomplice, mistreated, from which—though liberated—he dies.

Struggle between obedience and heart's desire breaks health of Madeline, about to marry. Desperate, her father dies from a stroke.

Greedy is shown to have swindled Madeline out of an inheritance from an uncle, whose agent he was. Ralph Nickleby, seeing his misdeeds exposed and discovering that the tortured Smike was his son by a concealed marriage, hangs himself. Squeers lands in prison.

A double wedding radiates happiness uniting Kate-Charles Cheeryble; and Madeline—nursed back to health—with Nicholas. They disclaim Ralph's crime-stained estate. (16—III—A)

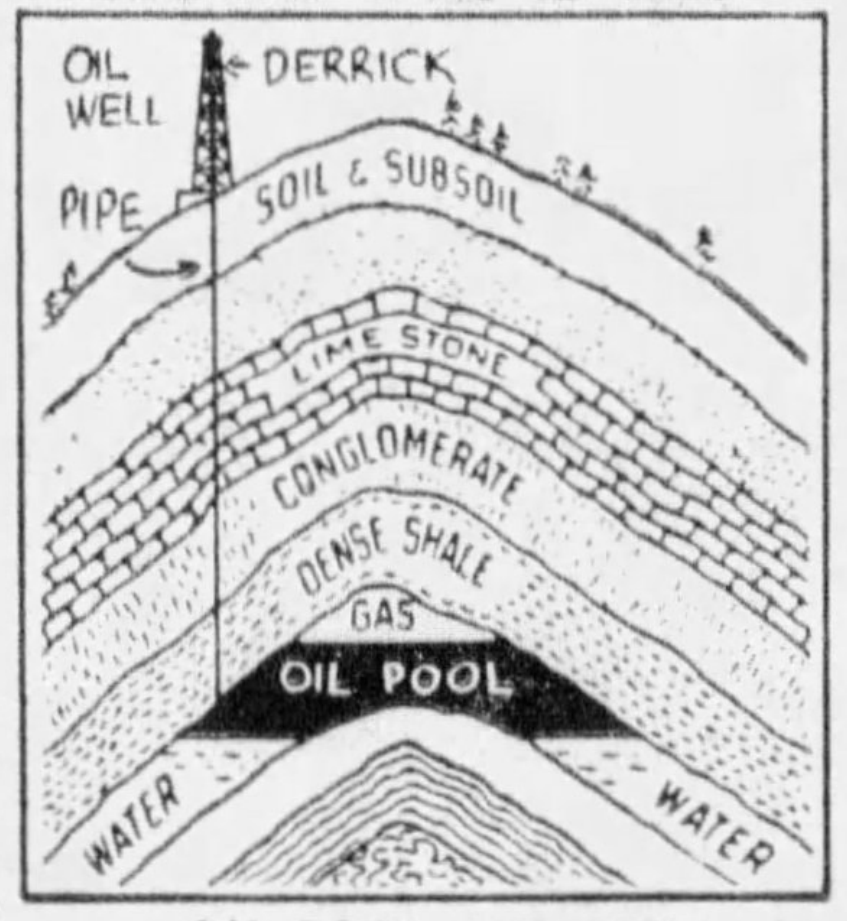
FUELS FROM CRUDE OIL BY DISTILLATION

Crude oil or petroleum is a most important source of liquid fuels. It is a mixture of hydrocarbons and found in underground pools by drilling. It is brought to surface by pumping or pressure of gases escaping from it (gusher).



OIL POOL AND WELL

Diagram (above) shows fractional distillation of crude oil into its constituents by heating it in a closed still and changing the receiver for the condensed vapors at the given temperature intervals. Left: How oil may be imprisoned underground. Twenty states produce oil in commercial quantities in U. S. The first oil well in America producing petroleum in commercial quantities was drilled by Col. E. L. Drake in Titusville, Pa., (1859).

Events Moved Fast and Furious

1—President's inaugural speech closed the banks. That shock rattled plates and saucers for miles around.

2—Announcement that the New Deal was here to stay. There are still some people who hope it is only a flurry.

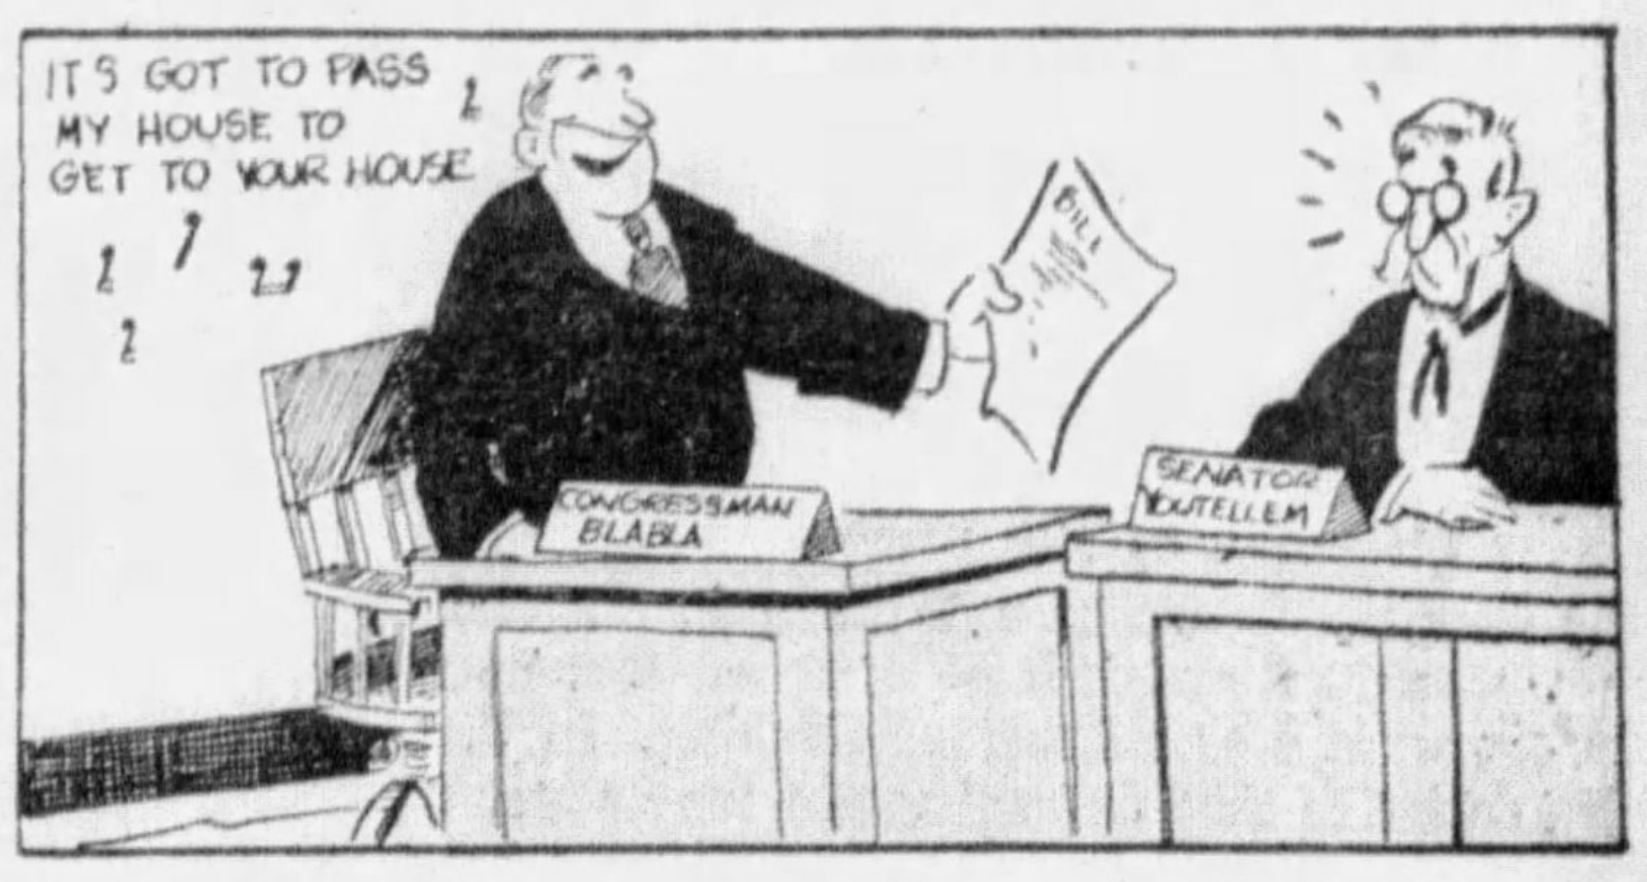
3—Budget calls for ten billion billion dollars for 1934. That's handling a fountain pen like a crowbar.

4—Dollar revalued between 50 and 60 cents, F. O. B. Still looks like a dollar to us. Beer raises its shy head.

5—Treasury grabs all the loose gold for future reference. If you want to stop leaks now you can use putty.

6—Supreme Court refuses to let them foreclose on Minnesota farmer's home, garage or hangar. Let them take the barn and the silo.

7—Shakeup in Democratic national committee reveals six Republican stowaways.



8—Lawyer-lobbyists are told to be out of Washington by sundown. New records were hung up in the twilight.

9—Testimony indicates that some postmasters not only burn letters but put the torch to postcards if the message indicated the writer was having a good time.

10—The RFC gets a reprieve until 1935 and the liquor tax bill is okayed. As the Congressman said to the Senator, "It's got to pass my house to get to your house."

11—Liquor makes it appearance again to great cheering and much profiteering. Repeal only made it more expensive.

12—Transportation report urges eventual federal control of railroads. Hope they don't take up our life pass on the Honkus, Western and Sideswipe R. R. You need a life pass on that road to pass one telegraph pole.

13—Government recognizes Mendieta as Cuban president. If the Cuban office boy recognizes him that means he has been there more than once.

A Job for Businessmen

The Efficiency and Economy Survey Should Be Made by Commercial Experts

After having been quoted as saying he probably would ask a commission of business experts to make an efficiency and economy survey of the municipal government, like the one which proved so successful in Baltimore, Mayor W. N. McNair apparently changed his mind yesterday, and asked, contemptuously, what businessmen knew about city hall. Well, the Baltimore survey proved that even if they do not know a great deal at the outset they can quickly learn.

The very essence of the Baltimore plan is that business methods shall be applied to municipal activities. It was executives, accountants and engineers of great commercial enterprises in the Maryland city who showed the politicians how to turn a deficit into a surplus and at the same time improve the quality of the municipal service. Mr. McNair seems inconsistent to us in praising Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, while belittling his plan.

The question of the proposed survey is to be left to the Council. Councilman William A. Magee has advocated such a procedure, and it is to be hoped that he will bring the other councilmen to his way of thinking. In the meantime it is also desirable that Council revise the budget and bring appropriations within the city's estimated revenues. The city is far from "broke"; there is no question of its being able to pay the interest on its bonds; but an unbalanced budget has possibilities of embarrassment.

Having failed, for the first time in its history, to raise the amount of money deemed necessary to carry on its activities this year, the Community Fund (formerly called the Welfare Fund) has revised the budgets of its constituent social welfare agencies. The advantage of centralization of agencies under the Fund is seen in the fact that it permits the heaviest cuts to be made where they can best be stood, thus leaving not so seriously diminished the appropriations of the agencies whose services are most needed.

In announcing plans for its meeting in Florida next month—a meeting in which several Pittsburgh chemists are to take prominent parts—the American Chemical Society declares the conclave will show that chemistry, an influence unknown in previous depressions, has by means of research created products which bolstered consumption, employed capital and workers, and steadied industry. This is of special local interest.

The Mellon Institute of Industrial Research is an outstanding example of chemistry's aid in fighting the depression. Several years ago, in a report on "How to Tackle Unemployment," a committee of three members of the British Liberal Party, headed by former Premier David Lloyd George, praised the Mellon Institute as "a factor in the rapid growth of American prosperity" and recommended that the British government establish a similar institution.

Upholding a view that has often been expressed in these columns, Dr. Solon J. Buck, director of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, writes in the current issue of Greater Pittsburgh, the Chamber of Commerce monthly, that although the city's history is unusually interesting, and significant "not only locally but nationally and internationally," "a knowledge of that history has been less cultivated, both within and without the community, than has that of any of the other major American communities."

We are glad to find Dr. Buck in agreement with us that Frick and Westinghouse, who are not mentioned in the chapter on "captains of industry" in the new history textbook ordered for Pittsburgh public schools, are "figures of national and international importance." It is interesting, by the way, to learn that Dr. C. Hale Sipe, the Butler historian, who first called public attention to the omissions in this textbook, has received about 400 commendatory letters.

Dr. Buck suggests that a better knowledge of Pittsburgh's history by the people of Pittsburgh would strengthen the distinctiveness of the community's personality. If it is desirable for a man or women to have a personality that is not commonplace, it should be even more of an asset for a city. From that standpoint a greater appreciation by Pittsburghers of Pittsburgh's history might have civic and even indirectly commercial value.

Every winter for years the Sun-Telegraph has received a request from John M. Phillips, former president of the State Game Commission, to publish an appeal to suburban residents to put out feed for birds. Mr. Phillips has been ill recently, and perhaps on that account we have not heard from him. But here is the appeal anyway. At Frick Park suet, tied to the limbs of trees or bushes, has proved attractive to birds. But cracked grain or bread crumbs will do.

Cardinals and song sparrows were singing yesterday as though spring were just around the corner. But W. E. Clyde Todd, curator of ornithology at Carnegie Museum, reports that because of the severity of the winter none of the migratory birds has yet returned from the South. The average date of the first appearance of robins is February 22. Fortunately there has been little snow to cover the weeds on whose seeds many birds depend for food. This promises to be the dryest February in Pittsburgh's Weather Bureau history.

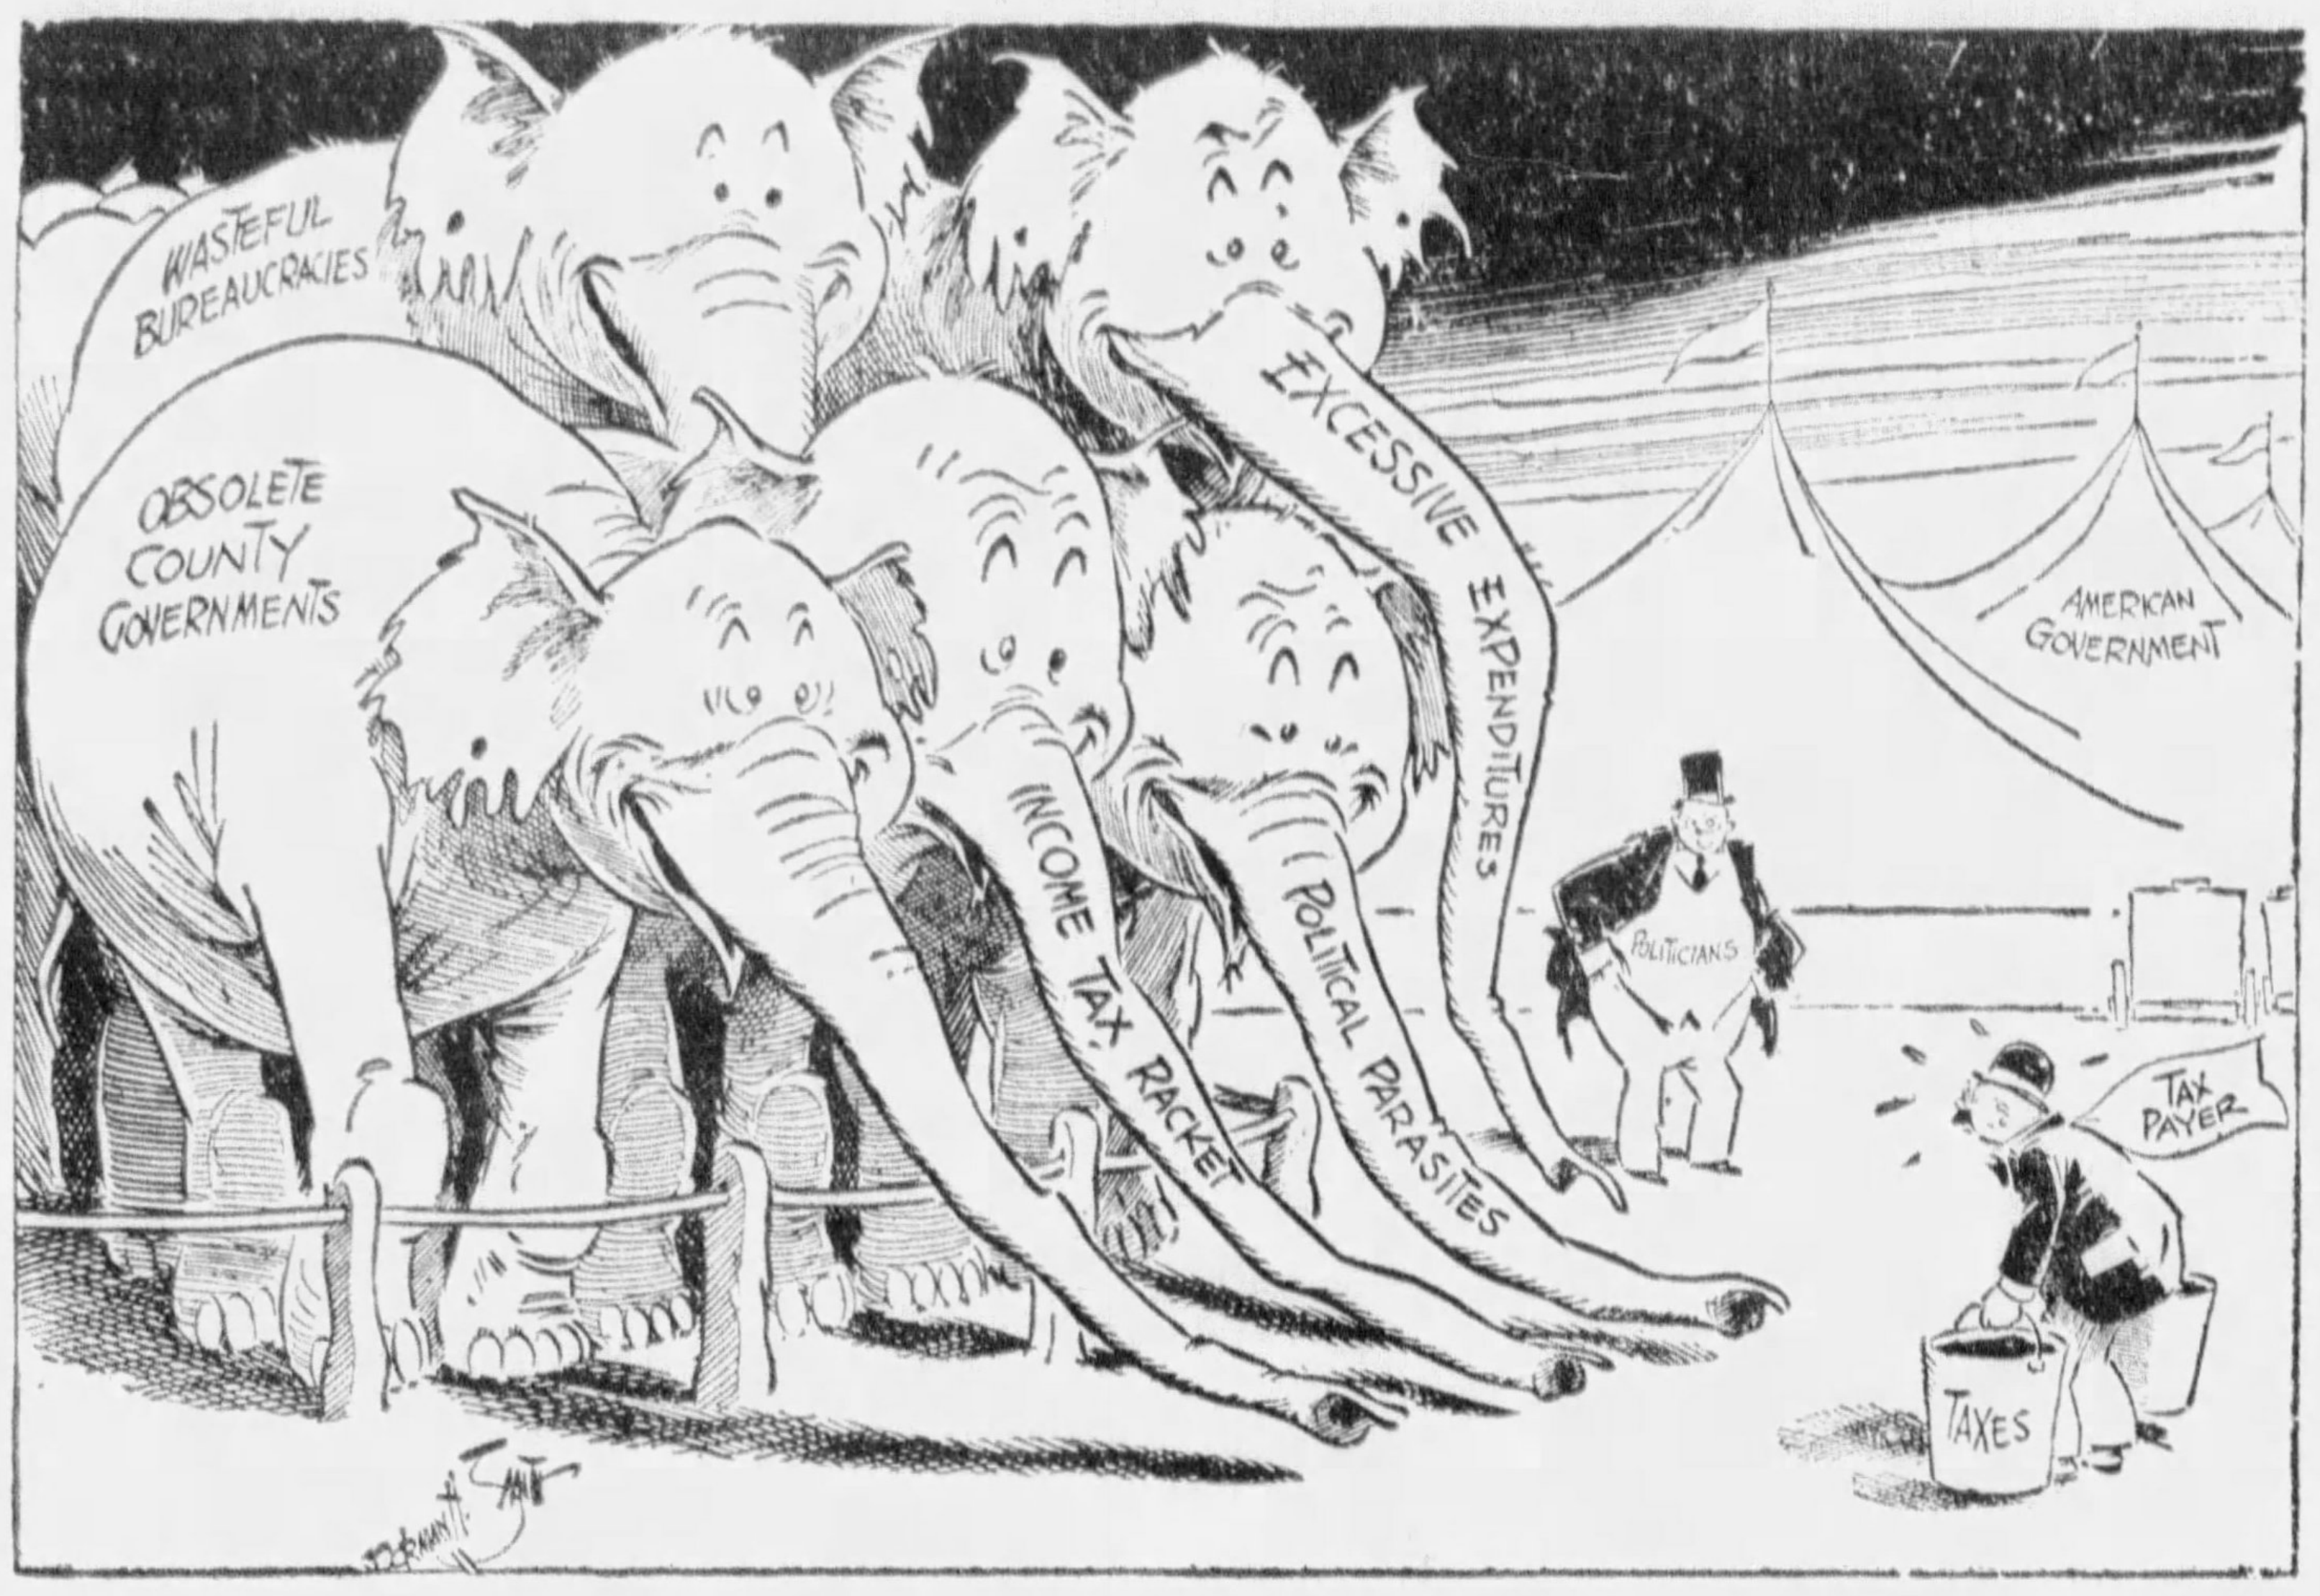
Motorists may remember this as "the winter when the battery froze." The Pittsburgh Motor Club gives useful advice in respect to this trouble. It says that when the temperature is low distilled water should not be placed in the battery except just before running the car. While a fully charged battery will stand 90 below zero, a battery testing at 1,150 will freeze at five above.

The number of persons killed in automobile accidents in Allegheny County last year, 257, was 16 less than the number the year before. But the number of accidents, 5,587, was 554 greater than in 1932. G. E. Clarkson, manager of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council, attributes this to better reporting of accidents. He fears, however, that the new "teeth" in the law governing accidents will cause some drivers to evade reporting them this year. We shall know better how to deal with the problem as we note how the new law works.

Are you a safe driver? Do you take the proper precautions? Do you know what to do in an emergency? Test yourself by answering some instructive questions which will appear in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The questions are being used by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters in a nation-wide campaign to teach Americans to be careful when motoring.

The Water Boy and the Sacred Elephants

(Copyright, 1934.)



Siam is not the only country that regards white elephants as sacred.

This country has a menagerie of costly white elephants exceeding in numbers and in voracity anything that Siam ever dreamed of.

If we could get rid of these two elephants at once conditions would immediately be a great deal improved.

And with those two gone the rest of the herd would be easily disposed of.

After all, our white elephants are sacred to nobody but the politicians—and why should the taxpayer continue to be the politicians' water boy?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—In the Dorothy Parker manner: Isn't it like me to draw whatever this is on my right for dinner? With my worries, she wants to know if I'm crossing this summer. I'm crossing the hill to the poorhouse but what's that to her? Wonder if my white tie ends are as jaunty as Clive Brooks'?

Green turtle soup makes me go burp but this is certainly the billiards. If Old High Tonsil wasn't looking I'd crunch a few crackers. She says she hears it will be dull on the Lido this season. Isn't that devastating? I must telephone Cobbie so he can spawn an extra.

I look like someone she used to know. A lot of cocoanut milk! Well, she looks like Queen Esther at the cantata and what do you know about that! All right I'll think up descriptions: "Blubber lips with round rascally eyes." I don't want to play that any more. I came to gorge.

Thank goodness, we reached the fish without mentioning Freud. Maybe I'm too Jung! When I'm at myself I get off things like that one after another. Keep you laughing hours. Either that's a cracker-crumb or a hoot-nanny on the side of her neck. I'll try slyly to flick it off with my napkin. Missed!

Her father used to own the largest plantation in Louisiana. From the sewth! She and her sister were educated abroad. Hothouse flowers. Never mingled with people. She's being contaminated by some ragweeds this large evening. Why can't she keep quiet and let me hoe into this fish. She's shinnying up the geneological tree again. Her husband is a descendant of Bobbie Burns. I'm friendly with Burns and Allen, can name all the Presidents in rotation and look goofy like Itchy-Kitchy, the Hoot Owl Boy.

What did I think of the Hindoo dancers? No use to say I didn't see them, she'll talk me into going. I thought they were swell. Such grace, such litheness, such entrecote! That last one will goal her. In fact she did arch a brow. Any time they get uppity with me I arch their brows. Out in Plattsburg, Mo., they regard me as one the best brow-archers that ever left for the city. Next to Jay Price.

* * *

Maybe she'd give up talking if I started eating with my knife. Or perhaps she'd swoon. I haven't a bad shoulder for swooning at that. She wonders if I have been to the Matisse exhibit. No, but I have been to a Brooklyn Marathon dance and up until my voice changed was a fool for transfer pictures. That's about as far as I go in art. I've always thought it a dirty trick what movies did to the magic lantern. Something primitive about the magic lanern. She should see my scene of bisons bucking a Dakota blizzard. That is a one!

Our Little Flower murmurs to the waiter: "Garcon, mettez un peu l'eau!" I know that one. She wants a dipper of water. Why not "Encore l'eau?" Anyway it's about time for her to yank her teeth in out of the weather. The molar type of beauty. Saw Tooth Tess, the dance hall girl. Teeth for three! And all air cooled.

* * *

Now they have started dancing. A cookie she calls it dawnce-ing." She says she often foxtrotted with the Prince of Wales. Everybody has who visited London. I've a notion to hell her around in an old-fashioned waltz until she cries "Uncle." Maybe I'd better tell her about the time I danced with Irene Castle. And next day Irene announced her retirement.

This salad is nothing if not fragrant. I know, garlic! The buzzards will be circling soon. I'm going to fill up on it and knock a few people stiff. High Tonsil will want to run back to her Prince of Wales if she gets to the leeward of me. I think I'll sulk awhile. When did I sulk last? O, I remember. The time they gave me that dribble-glass at Floyd Gibbons' party with me trying to talk lit'ry to Elinor Glyn. But it was just an itty-bitty pet. Not a full-blown pout.

* * *

At last the coffee. Even if I haven't cut much of a swath I've at least kept her from worrying someone else. The way I am. Always thinking of others. Still they won't appreciate me. Shakespeare was dead 50 years before he came into his own. Maybe this java will lift my spirits. Awk! It tastes like a jumble of old prunes and discarded dress shields heated over an invalid lightning bug!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Can Women Stand the Truth?

When I first started writing this column, my boss, an old and able newspaperman, said to me:

"Remember, there's one unbreakable law in writing a column—NEVER CRITICIZE WOMEN! Women can't stand criticism. They won't take it like men. A man doesn't care what anyone says about his sex in general. Sometimes he'll be interested and write in, and put up a good argument. But he'll always be a good sport about it.

"BUT WHATEVER ELSE THEY MAY BE, WOMEN ARE NEVER GOOD SPORTS ABOUT CRITICISM.

"If you criticize the feminine sex in an editorial, each individual woman will take it as an insult and proceed to act upon it. She won't act as a man would, either. She won't write in frankly and challenge your statements. SHE'LL GET EVEN WITH YOU.

"She'll bombard you, and get her friends to bombard you, with anonymous letters. Or she'll make her husband write in and say he'll cancel his subscription unless you're fired. And if she's a clubwoman, you can prepare for real trouble. For she'll get her club to pass a resolution condemning not only you, but your paper.

"There's nothing that editors dread as much as clubwomen. And that isn't just because women's clubs have power. Men's clubs have power, too. But you know how men's clubs are going to use their power. They follow certain sporting rules.

"But you can never count on women's clubs. They do the most amazing things—go off half-cocked into protests and demonstrations, without the slightest investigation.

"IF WOMEN THINK THEY'RE IN THE RIGHT — AND SHOW ME THE WOMAN WHO DOESN'T THINK SHE'S IN THE RIGHT—THEY'RE ABSOLUTELY UNSCRUPULOUS ABOUT GETTING THEIR WAY. THEY'LL STOP AT NOTHING.

"So, whatever you do, never criticize women. Particularly, mothers and clubwomen. You may think they're public nuisances. You may have proofs that they're getting by with murder. But keep it to yourself, and hand out the good old baloney—or they'll get your scalp."

That's what my boss said to me fifteen years ago, when I started writing this column. At intervals, other bosses have repeated the same advice. According to them, it's as good today as it was in 1918. Yet, no matter how often I hear it, it makes me mad.

Haven't I seen proof of these statements, over and over? Yes, I must admit I have.

Have I ever yet published an article criticizing women that didn't have a mean, petty, unfair comeback? No, I haven't.

And don't all other wise columnists follow this advice religiously, with fear and trembling? They do. John Smith and Bill Jones may be panned, ad lib, but not once in a blue moon is there even a Feeble Squeak against the Ladies.

All this—I admit, agree and regret—is true.

AND YET, I STILL BELIEVE IN WOMEN. I STILL BELIEVE THEY CAN LISTEN TO THE TRUTH AND TAKE IT LIKE GAME SPORTS. AND AGAINST ALL HAZARDS, I SAY WHAT I THINK ABOUT US GIRLS—MYSELF INCLUDED—AND I THINK PLENTY!

What happens? Exactly what my editor prophesied happens. Every tantrum, every histerical protest, every stab-in-the-dark comes off, just as specified.

BUT SOMETHING HE DIDN'T PROPHESY ALSO HAPPENS.

FOR EVERY NINE WOMEN WHO CAN'T TAKE IT LIKE GAME SPORTS, THERE IS ONE WHO CAN. AND THAT ONE IS WORTH ALL THE WORK AND WORRY!

After all, considering the lives women have led for several million years—their lack of training, their ignorance of larger issues and attitudes—isn't one out of 10 a pretty fair average of sportsmanship? It seems to me it is.

So, I'm continuing to write for women. And though my editors yell their heads off, I'm going to write the truth for and about women.

What'll it buy me? Plenty of grief. But when I read the letter from the one woman who is an exception—when I see the courage and tolerance and good that that woman has achieved in the face of overwhelming odds — I should worry about a little punishment!

So that's MY answer to the Male Shush chorus. But maybe YOU don't agree? Perhaps you won't even admit that women AREN'T game sports? If so, this space is as much yours as mine. Let's hear your come-back.

THE FUTURE

By Winifred Black

No, I won't have my fortune told today, thank you. Nor yet tonight — nor tomorrow, nor any other day or night that ever blooms upon the stalk of Time.

I don't want to know what's going to happen to me in this next year. It might frighten me to death even to think of it, if it was bad news.

And if I should hear from the fortune teller that a dark man was arriving with a bag of gold on his back and a warm heart to me in his hand, I might spend all the rest of the time looking out of the window watching for him—and that you know would never do.

Never in the wide, wide world.

You can always bear trouble when it really arrives, but to think of it before it comes—to dream of it, to worry over it, to dodge here and there, trying to get away from it—that's what drives people crazy.

If it's going to come you can't do a thing about it, and what's the use of worrying and suffering the pangs of death for weeks and months over something that will be all over in 24 hours at the very worst.

No, I have no use for the gift of prophecy, if there is such a thing.

I never saw any good come of it in my life, did you? And I've seen a great deal of harm come of it.

Jealousy, suspicion, misunderstanding, quarrels, estrangements, they are all in the book of the fortune teller and she'll wish them on to you just like that—if you don't watch out.

I'd like to be a fortune teller myself, for just one day, wouldn't you?

I know what I'd tell the poor haggard woman who thinks her husband is paying entirely too much attention to the giddy blonde in the next apartment.

I'd tell her how much her husband loves here, and how he appreciates her wise tolerance, and I'd say to her:

"Every time you have a specially good dinner ready for that husband of yours, and every time you tell him some pleasant little story to amuse him, he looks at you and thinks 'How wise I was to choose this woman for my wife—why, she's worth a dozen of all the giddy blondes that ever made a hair dresser's fortune for her.'"

And I'd tell the old man who thinks all his poor relations are praying for his death, how much they all think of him and the first thing you know, he'd be so nice to them, that my fortune telling would turn out to be true—and wouldn't that be fun.

The vain, selfish, silly little middle-aged person who loves to consider herself a vamp—well, I would prophecy a few things to her—I'm telling you.

But on the whole I'm glad I can't even pretend to look even six little short hours ahead.

I can stand anything as long as I don't have to worry about it before it happens, and of all the gifts for which we have to thank the Maker of this strange world of ours, I think we should be most grateful for the curtain which hides from our poor terrified eyes—the future!

ISN'T IT SO?

The best place of all to put your troubles is in your pocket—especially if you select a pocket with a hole in it.

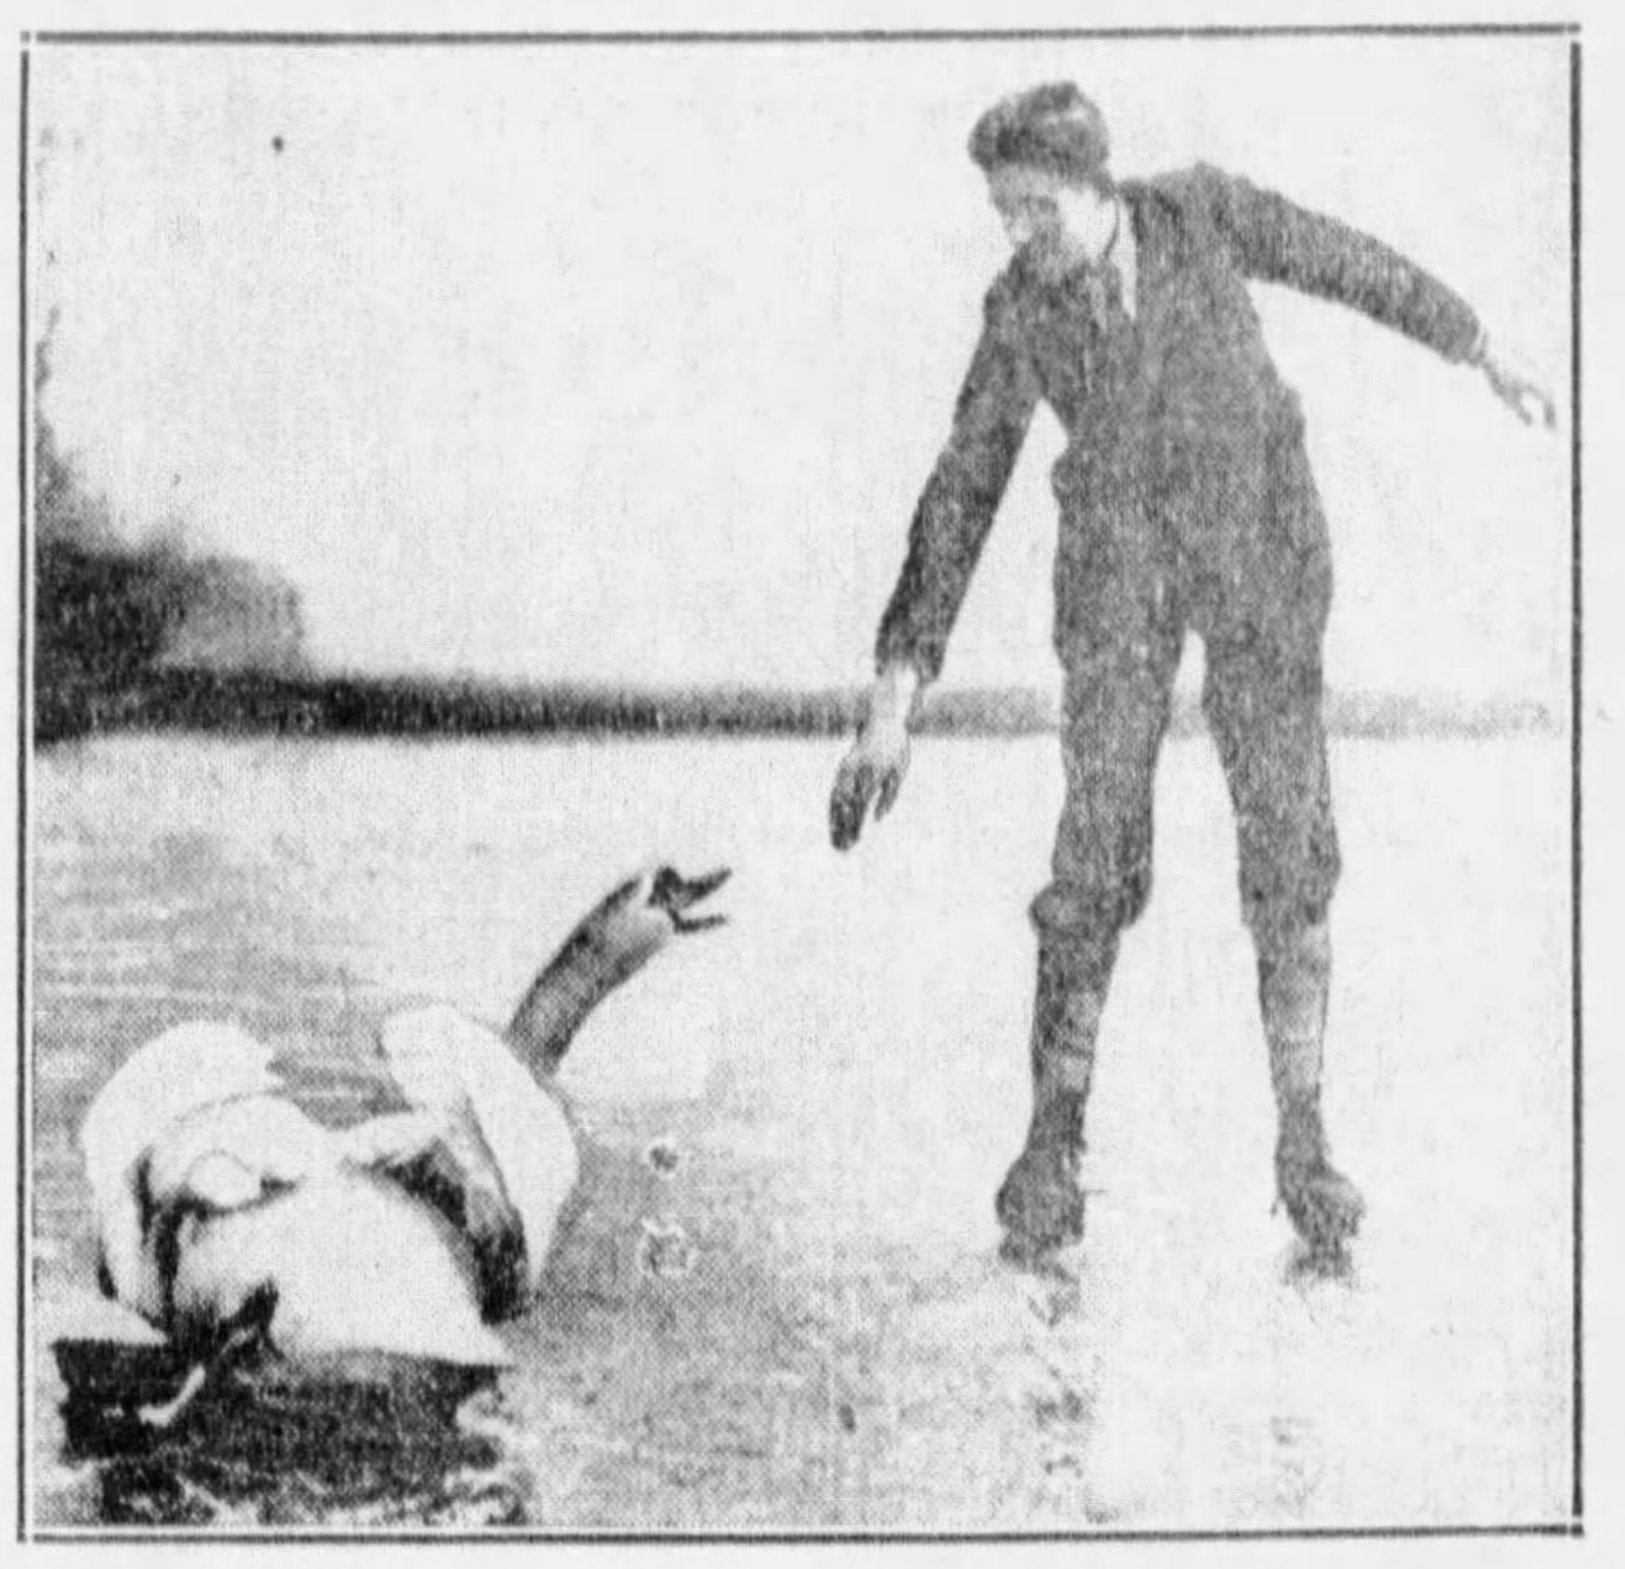
Text for Today I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.—Romans, xii:1.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER

To Your Friends in Other Cities

Swan and Skater

Railroad and Motor Bus or Truck.



THIS SWAN, FROZEN OUT OF HIS LAKE, RESENTING THE AGILITY AND NEAR APPROACH OF A SKATER, REMINDS YOU OF THE RAILROADS' ATTITUDE TOWARD AUTOMOBILES AND TRUCKS.

London has had very cold weather, about which it knows little, with thick ice on lakes and streams. This picture shows a lake near Windsor Castle with one of the royal swans frozen out of his nice water and highly indignant because a rapid traveler on skates has come near and is able to circle around him.

It seems, to the swan, wrong for somebody to have such an easy time on the slippery ice, while he can only slip and slide without making progress.

With all possible kindness, with full appreciation of the invaluable services that railroads render to the country, railroad men are reminded that this swan in a way has taken the same attitude toward skaters that they take toward motor omnibuses and motor trucks. Hating the skater can't do the swan any good. If he would develop his wings and get up off that slippery ice he could outfly the skater and resume his superior role.

Human Side of the News

Another Forward Step Is Taken in the Campaign Against the Dreaded Yellow Fever

By Edwin C. Hill

SCIENCE, so Dr. George E. Vincent tells us, has forged another shackle for Yellow Jack. The doctor's announcement to the California Institute of Technology reveals the discovery of a serum which immunizes human beings to yellow fever. The world will hail the result and long remember it.

But the world, I imagine, has too soon forgotten what happened five years ago in Accara, a little seaport on the gold coast of West Africa. Three men were there on a great adventure—a Japanese, an Irishman and a Scotchman, working in common and seeking neither gold nor ivory nor a lion's head for the trophy room. Theirs was greater game. After it they went with heads up, hope high and with the full knowledge that death stalked beside them, ready to strike without even the warning that a cobra might give.

The Japanese was a bacteriologist, one of the greatest of all times, Dr. Hidyeo Noguchi. The Irishman was a pathologist from London University, Prof. Adrian Stokes. The Scot was a scientist on the staff of the Rockefeller Institute, Dr. Williams Alexander Young. And how they worked in the heat, in the stink, in the God-forsaken hole! Not that they minded the conditions, for they were living apart from this plane.

Every cell in their brains, every fiber in their bodies was absorbed in that one thing—the finding of that malignant virus which, through the ages has been a scourge to humanity. The trail was hot. They redoubled their efforts.

All Three Succumb To the Monster

STOKES wrote back to far away Albion:

"We have the fish hooked. Unless we are careless and break the tackle, it will only be a matter of time until we land him."

But they never brought the monster to gaff! He lashed about and stung them—Stokes, Noguchi and Young. One by one the fever touched them. First the heaviness which an ordinary sore throat might bring, next the flush of the face and the eyes. Temperatures rose higher and higher for two or three days and then came a steady drop until they were below normal.

Their eyes, at first enlarged, narrowed down to mere slits. The skin grew cold and the color of lemon. Next the dreadful "black vomit," which Paris, Rome and London knew in the middle ages when it struck all alike, from the meanest peasant to the Pope of the Borgias. And then came death to Stokes, to Noguchi and to Young.

Yellow fever is a grave menace today, although it is confined to West Africa and to certain parts of South America. The most recent outbreaks occurred last March in Bolivia and Colombia, while three years ago three Americans died of it in the Sudan. Health authorities sound continual warning that the greatest precautions must be taken against the possibility of the entrance of yellow fever into a country and they point to the danger of the airplane as a carrier.

Mosquitoes Spread the Disease

WHILE science has not definitely established the virus, it has determined that 13 species of mosquitoes can carry it. And men died to find this out, too. When Yellow Jack flourished among our soldiers in Havana in 1900, three American Army doctors, Walter Reed, James Carroll and Jesse W. Lazear, undertook research work in a shack on the outskirts of the Cuban capital. They looked for the carrier and they found it, a certain type of mosquito.

If permitted to bite a victim in the first stages of the disease, this mosquito would, on biting a well person, convey the living germ to that person. The doctors called for volunteers for the tests and they got them. But the doctors themselves led the way. Carroll exposed himself and pulled through only after severe illness. Lazear let the germ-laden mosquitoes taste his blood and died. Reed survived two years, to pass away in 1902 from the results of overwork in Cuba.

But it is no fiction to say that they died that millions might live. The control work that followed in preventing the breeding of mosquitoes not only gave medicine the upper hand over the plague, but made possible the building of the Panama Canal.

Dr. Vincent, in telling today of the development of the serum, states that it has been achieved by the successful inoculation of 100 white mice through the brain. He mentions use of it for persons who contemplate trips to those parts of Africa and other lands where the disease is prevalent.

So medical science marches on, and so it will march while there are Noguchis, Reeds and those kindred spirits, of whom it has been said:

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Because you have never been able to make a large sum of money at one time, you have never given any serious attention to accumulating a bank account.

The idea of depositing a small sum each week and not disturbing it throughout the year does not appeal to you as a saving method.

Isn't it true that you have not wanted to adopt a plan which might make it necessary for you to deprive yourself of something in order to keep up the payments with regularity?

You want to feel free to spend according to the limits of your earnings.

And yet you complain that you have never had a bank deposit large enough to tide you over some unforseen demand.

When such a drain has come, you have had to go in debt, facing a struggle to meet your obligations.

Of course there is worry and often discouragement.

Your present state of despondency may be the result of not having made any preparation for unexpected expenses.

As a sensible person you should realize that you cannot go on, year after year, without having unusual demands upon your resources.

Isn't it better to be prepared than have to meet them with future income?
